NO PROGRESS IN INVESTIGATIONS LINDBERGH CASE

Kansas City Officers Say They Have Valuable Information

BULLETIN
Norfolk, Va., Mar. 24 —(AP)—The Ledger Dispatch said today that Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., 20-months-old son of the famous aviator, kidnaped from his parents' home in New Jersey more than three weeks ago, is reported on a yacht somewhere "in Chesapeake Bay."

The paper said three representatives of Norfolk citizens motored to the Soudan Mountain estate of the Lindberghs Tuesday night and yesterday interviewed Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh.

The visit of the Norfolk men to New Jersey was for the purpose of securing the assent of the Colonel to plans for the return of the baby involving the payment of a substantial ransom, the Ledger Dispatch says.

BULLETIN
Bloomington, Pa., Mar. 24 —(AP)—Kansas City City detectives, seeking Martin Depew in connection with the kidnaping of Mrs. John Donnelly in Kansas City last December said today they had information which indicated connections between the Donnelly case and the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

Detectives Robert Cole and Joseph Brennan have been working in Pennsylvania for several months, tracing all clues regarding Depew, whose wife is detained at Kansas City after being arrested here.

"We have information that will be more than a blind lead," Brennan said, "but it may be several days before we get to Trenton with it."

Hopewell, N. J., March 24 —(UP)—Two underworld characters, called "kidnappers" by police, were sought today as police continued their efforts to find some clue to the kidnaping of Baby Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr.

Able Wagner, known in New York underworld circles, and Harry Fleischer, a former member of the Detroit "Purple Gang," are the two men police announced they wanted to question. Neither has been seen for several weeks and raids at various places they were reported to be, have been futile.

According to the morning police statement by Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, Wagner was seen about the central part of New Jersey shortly before the kidnaping. Since then he has not been seen, and his actions at the time of the kidnaping have not been reported. The police statement added that unsubstantiated reports reaching them were that Wagner and Fleischer were as-

SMILED UNTIL THE END

Miami, Fla., Mar. 24 —(AP)—Anne Booker, noted diving star, whose back was broken in a high dive at Vienna three years ago, died in a hospital today.

The end came peacefully for the girl whose bravery, despite her broken back, attracted famous surgeons and bone specialists to study her case. Mother Mary Alice, of St.

Francis hospital, said Miss Booker died as she had faced her injuries—smiling and conscious.

"She had known for two weeks the end was near," Mother Mary Alice said. "We never tried to deceive Anne as to her true condition—she was much too brave a person."

Next Monday would have been Anne's 23rd birthday.

WANT BRICK PAVEMENTS?

Between DeKalb and Malta the Lincoln Highway has been re-paved with brick by the Emmerson administration. There are several miles of it there and other brick highways have been constructed in Illinois by this administration to the total of seventy miles and we are told that the cost of this brick highway is eleven thousand dollars per mile MORE than the regular concrete highway.

Mr. Omer Custer, the candidate whom Governor Emmerson seeks to seat in the Governor's chair at Springfield, is president of the Brick Paving Brick Plants at Galesburg and Streator.

Brick pavements are not only costly but they are deadly. There have been five people killed on the new brick paving west of DeKalb and many other lives lost on the other brick pavements because of their treacherous tendency to cause cars to skid. When the state Highway Department completed the DeKalb stretch they erected signs "Slippery When Wet" at intervals along its course. What an eloquent condemnation to write over the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money?

Brick paving is dangerous to drive on at night because the dark road surface absorbs the light from your headlights. It can never be as smooth a surface as concrete. In fact, the only advantage we can see in the use of brick for road surface is to the pocketbook of the brick manufacturer.

Candidate Custer is no doubt a good businessman and a good fellow but here in Dixon we believe the people prefer that roads shall be built of the more efficient and less expensive concrete. We have 325 families in severe straits because their bread-winners are cement plant workers and the Dixon cement plant is closed while roads are being built of brick and cement contracts are being let out of Illinois.

Len Small, the Governor who made Illinois famous for its good roads, believes in using cement only, and lots of it.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

The Republican primary ballot will carry four names of candidates for the office of Representative in General Assembly. Of these four, The Telegraph recommends the nomination of the two present incumbents, Henry C. Allen of Whiteside County and Dennis J. Collins of DeKalb County, because of their splendid records in office. Their voting records at Springfield speak eloquently for their careful study of all bills and their devotion to the welfare of their constituents. Their record of voting on bills affecting farming interests is especially commendable and that should recommend them to the voters in the cities and towns of this district as well as in the country because the very life of our cities and towns depends upon the welfare and prosperity of the farmer.

The thinking Republican voter will vote for Allen and Collins.

DEFINITE TREND TOWARD BETTER TIMES IS SEEN

Secretary Mills Of Treasury Cites Figures Of Improvement

Washington, March 24 —(UP)—Secretary of Treasury Mills said today that statistics collected by his department indicated a definite trend toward strengthened financial and economic conditions in the United States.

While warning against interpretation of his remarks as a prediction of booming business in the near future, Mills said the Department's figures were definitely encouraging.

Saying he wanted to let the figures speak for themselves, Mills called attention to a decrease of $157,000,000 during the last six weeks in money in circulation.

This decrease allows for all the seasonal changes and can be regarded as virtually a decrease in that amount of hoarding.

Makes No Prophecies
In discussing changes in the financial situation, the Secretary declared:

"I want these figures to speak for themselves. I am making no prophecies about present or future business, but merely stating events which have taken place."

"The decrease in money in circulation during the past six weeks has followed a very definite trend."

In discussing bank failures Secretary Mills gave the following figures showing the decrease in bank suspensions since creation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other legislation passed to improve the financial situation.

Mills said: "There were 69 net bank failures for the week of January 8, for the week of January 16 there were 88; 75th week next, and 60 for the week continued on Page 2)

DEATH SENTENCE OF SEVEN BLACKS UPHELD BY COURT

Alabama High Court Orders Execution, Friday, May 13

Montgomery, Ala., Mar. 24 —(UP)—Seven Negroes convicted of criminally assaulting two white girls on a freight train at Scottsboro, Ala., a year ago, today failed in their appeal to the Alabama Supreme Court from death sentences.

The high court upheld the convictions of seven of the eight Negroes involved in the incident, which claimed interest far beyond the borders of the state where it occurred.

One of the convictions, that of Eugene Williams, was reversed on the grounds he was a minor delinquent at the time of the alleged assault.

The Supreme Court set Friday, May 13, as the execution date.

The Negroes whose convictions were upheld, are Ozie Powell, Willie Robertson, Andy Wright, Olen Montgomery, Charley Worms, Clarence Norris and Haygood Patterson.

Testimony at the trial was that Ruby Bates and Victoria Price, white girls, "hoboing" from Chattanooga to Huntsville, Ala., were in a freight car with seven white youths when 10 or 12 Negroes jumped aboard.

A fight started. The white youths were thrown from the train. According to the testimony of the girls, the Negroes then attacked them.

Nine Arrested

Nine Negroes were arrested soon after a posse which met the train at Paintsville, Ala. When the prisoners were thrust into the Scottsboro jail, a mob, muttering about lynching, formed. National Guardsmen were summoned. The Negroes were bundled into automobiles and taken to Gadsden, Ala., for safe-keeping.

Their trial was held at Scottsboro, in the small courthouse protected by Guardsmen with machine guns and bayonets, who kept crowds estimated at 20,000 at bay. The trials were speedy. Eight of the defendants were sentenced to death. The ninth, 14-year-old Roy Wright, obtained a mistrial. He will be retried at the spring term of court.

Many Petitions
Thousands of letters and telegrams demanding executive clemency began to deluge the office of Gov. B. M. Miller. Radical labor groups and leaders in European countries were among those who protested.

When the case was brought on appeal to the state Supreme Court, Justice of that tribunal began to receive petitions. During the hearing before that body, one judge said that some of the letters threatened death if the sentences against the Negroes were allowed to be carried out.

The appeal was handled by George W. Chamblee, Chattanooga, Tenn. attorney, retained by the International Labor Defense, although Negro organizations had hoped to have Clarence Darrow appear in behalf of the eight youths. Darrow refused to associate in the case with the I. L. D. group, and withdrew.

Annual Heart Tag Day Is Announced

Permission has been given to representative of the Volunteers of America to hold their eleventh annual Heart Tag day in Dixon on Saturday, March 26. Headquarters will be in the Chamber of Commerce building with Miss Genevieve Lilly in charge of finances and young people's work.

The Volunteers of America is perhaps foremost in the nation in its systematic work in the prisons of the United States, maintaining homes for paroled or discharged men, homes for the aged, for children, and is especially known for its work in taking care of destitute families of men who are in prison.

The tags are to be sold largely in the residence districts for whatever the purchaser is willing to give. No sum will be too large and none too small to help this worthy cause.

James A. Shaulis Died In The West

Attorney J. O. Shaulis left last night for Los Angeles, Cal., where he was called by the death of his brother, James A. Shaulis, a former resident of Dixon. The latter passed away at Los Angeles Tuesday. He attended the Dixon college in his young manhood and became secretary of the college. Going to Los Angeles, Mr. Shaulis became manager of the Western Auto Supply Co. of that city, which controlled more than 3,000 branch stores. Attorney Shaulis will accompany the remains of his brother to Somerset, Pa., where burial will take place in the family lot. The deceased had attained the age of 51 years and was unmarried.

College Prank Leads To Shooting of Three

Last Saturday night several law students of the University of Missouri at Columbia "kidnaped" Miss Mary Louise Butterfield, queen of the engineering students' ball, and held her until after the hour set for her coronation. A few days later the engineers learned the identity of her captors and a group of them seized one, Burns Frederick, but he drew a revolver and in the fight three of his assailants were shot. The principals are shown above with Miss Mary Louise Butterfield. D. Frank Lucky (1) was shot in the abdomen and seriously wounded; Burns Frederick (2) allegedly did the shooting; James Harutun (3) and Stanley Ginn (4) were named with Frederick as among the kidnapers of Miss Butterfield; Charles Love (5) and Jerry Cebbe (6) were the other two wounded. They were shot in the legs.

OWNER OF FAMED 101 RANCH TOOK SHOT AT LAWYER

Defied Court Order to Sell Equipment Of Ranch And Stock

Marland, Okla., March 24 —(UP)—Colonel Zack I. Miller, founder of the famed 101 Ranch, turned the ranch's "White House" into an armed fort today and drove out two attorneys with gunplay in defiance of a court order for an auction sale of livestock and equipment to satisfy creditors.

One shot was heard from the "White House," scene of many hospitable gatherings in the ranch's more prosperous days, and the two attorneys came flying out with demands for law officers.

The attorneys, R. O. Wilson, Ponca City, and Neal Sullivan, Newkirk, represented Fred C. Clarke, receiver for the vast ranch, and had gone to the White House to serve papers authorizing an auction sale of 826 head of stock, including buffalo, elk and cattle, and equipment, today.

Miller, in bed suffering from a nervous disorder after his efforts to save the ranch, met them. A few moments later one shot was heard and the attorneys rushed from the house and telephoned the Sheriff at Newkirk.

Miller himself gave his version of the incident to the United Press in which he admitted firing the shot and defended his action as being justified because he said the sale was illegal.

Drain On Welfare Funds Increases

The recent cold weather has put an unexpected strain on the finances of the Dixon Welfare Association and all persons who have pledged donations of money to the Welfare are hereby urged to keep their pledges paid up promptly.

The Welfare Association is now maintaining with food and fuel more than 325 families, which means that about 1,600 people are dependent upon this organization for their daily food and warmth for their homes. The present load is much more than double that of last winter and is creating a serious drain upon the finances of the Welfare.

Donations of food, fuel, clothing or money are acceptable. The welfare headquarters over Sullivan's drug store are open Wednesday and Saturday. Anyone seeking further information communicate with George Shaw at the Evening Telegraph office.

The advantage in cost of mechanical corn pickers over hand husking was wiped out in Indiana in 1931 by the decline in wages.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Harris of Indianapolis will arrive tomorrow to assist in the services. Mr. Harris is the musical director and will be assisted by Dick Choate, pianist and xylophone player.

About two dozen men are finishing up the work on the choir platform and pews today. In spite of the deep snow and stormy weather sixty men labored yesterday and the day before so that the building will be finished tonight. Mr. Nichols, the furnace man, is donating his services today in installing the four large furnaces and two stoves. The wiring is being done by the Cronwell electric shop. Cinder walks are being put in on both sides of the building.

Mr. Harris desires to meet the choir at 7:15 Friday night for organization and brief rehearsal. A rehearsal will be held following the services.

STRICKEN FROM REVENUE BILL; VOTE IS 223-153

Disorderly Session Of the House Prior To Action Today

BULLETIN
Washington, March 24 —(UP)—The 2 1-4 per cent sales tax proposal was removed from the billion dollar revenue bill by the insurgent rank and file of the House today.

The action wrecked the tax bill proposed by the coalition of Democratic and Republican leaders. It means the battered leaders will now try to take their bill back to committee in another effort to devise a plan for raising the $1,096,000,000 necessary to meet the deficit and balance the budget. The vote was 223 to 153.

Washington, March 24 —(UP)—The House showed new signs of disorder and strife today as it met to face the 2 1-4 per cent sales tax issue.

Friendly negotiations about procedure came to nothing when Republican Leader Snell broke in to announce he would not consent to anything that would interfere with the normal schedule of the House.

This objection prevented an arrangement for a swift vote on the sales tax issue and left the House plodding along with prospects that a vote would be reached late in the day.

The House, by a vote of 149 to 145 adopted the Lehlbach Amendment exempting from the sales tax merchant vessels on which the government had advanced 50 per cent of the cost in construction loans.

It was the first vote of the day but in no sense a test on the sales tax. Democratic Floor Leader Rainey, of Illinois, was one of those who voted for the Amendment, although he ardently supports the sales tax.

Both Sides Nervous
Both sides were a little nervous and uncertain at the opening of what was expected to be one of the most momentous sessions of the House in years. The whole tax program of the leaders was at stake. They were not very happy about the prospects. Privately they told their friends they thought they were beaten. Publicly they insisted yet that the hub of the billion dollar revenue bill would be endorsed.

Only a fourth of the House membership of 435 was present when Speaker Garner called them to order. The galleries were packed with men and women who had waited hours in order to get good seats for the big show.

While the clerk droned through the Journal, the sales tax opposition leader, Rep. LaGuardia, Rep. N. Y. went over on the Democratic side to see Acting Chairman Crisp of the Ways and Means committee. They were very friendly. LaGuardia then took the floor and proposed an agreement to dispense with the flood of amendments to the sales tax issue and get down to the real issue whether it should stay in the bill.

Wanted Show Down
Crisp thought that was a good idea. He did not see any use in wasting time on amendments. The thing to find out first was whether the House wanted the sales tax, he said.

"I am as anxious for a showdown as anyone," he told the House. "I would be perfectly delighted to let the test come at once."

Negotiations proceeded in a very friendly vein for 15 minutes before Snell abruptly called a halt by his objection. He apparently feared that Crisp was being out-manuevered by the opposition.

His objection was received with some applause. During the discussion, Rep. Johnson, Rep. Wash., announced he had two new amendments. He said he would propose a 100 per cent import tax on "any goods manufactured by identified labor like they have in Russia." He said he would also offer a proposal to equalize the existing tariff law in view of depreciated foreign currencies.

There was constant milling on the floor. Members complained they could not hear. Representatives were arguing among themselves about parliamentary procedure. Several times Garner had to stop the debate to get order.

House Committee For Shoals Lease
Washington, March 24 — (UP) — The House Military Affairs committee by a vote of 13 to 8 approved today a Muscle Shoals bill providing a liberal leasing provision for the nitrate facilities but retaining government control of the power generated.

Under the terms of the bill, the President would be authorized to appoint a board of three members to have jurisdiction over leasing the plant for fertilizer production.

Preference in leasing is accorded to states and non-profit making farmers organizations.

"ON PLANTING A TREE"
In Memory of George Washington
Helen Carson Janssen
Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22, 1930.
LING your branches wide against the sky.
The friendly sky, and let your roots dig deep
In Mother Earth. The kindly clouds will weep
To quench your thirst. Soft winds will sigh

And birds will hang their cradles high
Among your boughs. Tired sons of soil will sleep
And eager youth its trust will keep.
Beneath your shade; there wrinkled age will die.

With reverent hands we plant this stairway tree
In gratitude for him who in that past,
Forever sacred, brave against the blast
Of war and tumult, made a nation free.
Stand firm and steadfast, battling wind and hail,
The symbol of a faith that shall not fail!

'Mr. Ann Harding' And Film Star To Seek Separation

Hollywood, Mar. 24 — (UP)—The familiar Hollywood custom of dubbing a comparatively unsuccessful actor as "the husband of" his more successful actress wife has broken up another of the screen's ideal romances.

Ann Harding, who rose to international fame in films, and Harry Bannister, who registered only faintly as a motion picture player, have announced they will seek a divorce.

Back of their decision, they let it be known, was Hollywood's insistence on speaking of Bannister as "Mr. Ann Harding."

Other film marriages have been ended by this custom of playfully or caustically pointing out the husband's lesser importance, but never has a couple been so candid in admitting it.

To the office of the United Press came a note signed by Miss Harding's own hand. It read in part:

"We are getting a divorce because, during our three years in the motion picture industry, we have been placed in a position which is untenable."

Harry is gradually losing his identity, becoming a background for my activities and looked upon as "Ann Harding's husband."

The note concluded that they had reached a decision that their only course was to separate so that Bannister could win back his position in the theater "before this unfortunate situation in pictures has a chance to reach us and destroy the love and respect we have for each other."

A note from Bannister confirmed that written by Miss Harding.

The Bannisters, who have a four-year-old daughter, Jane, were married in New York almost six years ago. They were equally famed on the stage there.

Three and a half years ago they came to Hollywood. Miss Harding's blonde, patrician beauty carried her almost to instant stardom and important money. Bannister got a few good parts at first, then found only bits.

Gradually he slipped into Hollywood's scheme as "Mr. Ann Harding."

Similar in many respects was the breaking up of the first marriage of Dolores Del Rio, Mexican beauty.

When she first came to Hollywood she was merely the personage wife of Jaime Del Rio, member of an important Mexican family and something of a playright.

She played a few minor parts, then blossomed out one of the most popular of stars. While she was climbing to dizzy heights, Jaime was tinkering with his plays.

Soon he became known as "the husband of Dolores Del Rio." Their divorce followed not long after.

Since Jaime Del Rio's death in Berlin, Miss Del Rio has married again.

The Bannisters temporarily dropped from sight after sending their notes so that details of their divorce procedure could not be learned.

Show Will Reach Its Highest Attainment This Year, Navy Pier

The spring flower and garden show, operating at the navy pier in Chicago, April 2nd, and continuing through the 9th, is the central theme of interest among garden clubs and those who have attended previous exhibits put on by an organization that knows no limitation to its achievements. Those acquainted with the president, Mrs. W. L. Karcher, of Preepore, cease to marvel at the results as they are well acquainted with her indomitable spirit and know she carries through to perfection anything she undertakes.

Three acres of floor space will be covered with exhibits. The show will present the appearance of an avenue almost half a mile long, lined with beautiful gardens, of a perfection never attained outdoors. It will be the largest flower show ever held in Chicago and directors of the Garden club of Chicago, the state federation which is financing and managing the enterprise, promises that it will attain the highest artistic standard yet seen in that city.

The first day of the show will be a special preview session, to which Governor and Mrs. Emmerson, Mayor Cermak, foreign consuls and city officials, park commissioners, world's fair committee members, and other distinguished guests have been invited.

Sixty-five garden clubs have entered more than 200 different exhibits, which range from decorative flower arrangements in bowls, to gardens built of living flowers on life size scale. In addition there will be extensive gardens built by the park boards and commercial houses. One formal garden will be 100 feet long.

Junior garden clubs will have largely increased space in the show, with exhibits which include practical playhouses with gardens, two built by girls and two by boys; bird houses, feeding tables, conservation posters, miniature houses, clay modeling, soap modeling, tree-leaf books and outdoor luncheon table decorations.

Table decorations will be usual constitute an important feature of the show. There will be four regular classes: Dinner tables, tables of nations, tea tables and breakfast tables. A special class has been arranged for special occasion tables.

Pleasant Meeting of South Dixon Unit

A pleasant meeting of the South Dixon Home Bureau Unit was held all day Tuesday, March 15th at the home of Mrs. Peter Hoyle with a picnic dinner at noon. The menu which was served was given out by the University of Illinois and was demonstrated by the ladies of the South Dixon Unit, and the principal ingredients were made of farm products from our own homes.

After the regular business meeting the lesson on "Practical Farm Menus or Making Use of Farm Products" was given by Mrs. Syverud. It was a splendid lesson, and told how so many of our farm products could be used in different ways, especially the wheat which is a very good product.

Mrs. Syverud also gave a talk on correct posture which was quite interesting. A program was then enjoyed which consisted of the following selections:

Two Ukulele solos—Mrs. Harold McCleary
Whistling solo—Mrs. Fritts
Piano solo—Mrs. Peter Hoyle
Piano duet—Mrs. A. T. Tullott and Mrs. Harold McCleary.
The meeting adjourned to hold the next session with Mrs. W. L. Fritts.

Ill. League Women Voters May Change Its Program of Work

Changes in its program of work have been considered by the Illinois League of Women Voters in a meeting just held in Champaign-Urbana and attended by members from all parts of the state. Presided over by the President, Mrs. Ralph B. Treadway of Glen Ellyn, other prominent League leaders were Mrs. Guy E. Tawney, Mrs. E. C. Schmidt and Mrs. William C. Rose of Urbana, Mrs. J. H. Stratton of Jacksonville, Mrs. Lawrence Stepp of Paris, Mrs. Franklin Davis of Peoria, Miss Cella Howard of Elgin and Mrs. Marc C. Law of Highland Park.

The meeting was one of several which will take place prior to the national biennial convention, to be held in Detroit April 25-30 where recommended changes will be voted upon. Among items which will come up then for consideration is the recommendation of an established system of federal, state and local unemployment relief. This may be approved, modified or rejected by the convention, which votes the program item by item.

Of great interest to Illinois is the proposal that the League of Women Voters advocate the reorganization of I county government and continue its support of the direct primary "with such modifications as will make nominations more representative." Mrs. W. W. Ramsey of Chicago, Chairman of the League's Committee on Nominations and Elections, led the discussion of the latter subject.

Ponselle, Now Famous, Is Seeking a Husband

By JANE EADS
New York, Mar. 24 — (AP)—Rosa Ponselle, 34-year-old prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is seeking the missing link in the charmed chain of her life—a husband.

Her dramatic soprano voice has brought her international fame. Her wealth includes a penthouse overlooking the Hudson, a villa in Switzerland, swift motor cars, beautiful clothes, travel. Her Latin charm and exotic beauty have brought her many admirers, but no answer to her prayer for a husband.

"All my girlhood was a battle between career and marriage," she said today. "I have the career, now I must have a husband. If the right man came along, I wouldn't hesitate a moment."
For the past 13 years Ponselle has sung with the Metropolitan Opera Company. She has been singing in public ever since she was five years old. She couldn't stop now and she doesn't want to.

"If he were the right man, you see, I wouldn't have to give up my career entirely. But I would want to be able to stay in one place long enough to maintain a home for him and raise children," she declared.

The two greatest thrills in Ponselle's life, she said today were singing, and pretending she was the mother of the neighbor's baby when she was a little girl.

YOUR CHILDREN

WHEN JUNIOR "CATCHES COLD"

The time to cure a cold is at the beginning. Of course, we know that no miracle can happen and that it usually takes several days to "run its course," as the saying goes. But to let a cold run on is very foolish and to allow children to run around coughing with their noses all stopped up and looking and feeling miserable, without doing anything to help them, is unwise. More things get their start including flu and grip from common colds, than can be estimated. For don't you see that what a cold does is to reduce the fighting power of the system?

I believe most mothers, have their own panaceas for colds, at least they should have. Almost every woman with children has a regular course of procedure from her doctor to put into action when sniffles and cough appear. In its incipient stage, that is, when the very first sign of a cold appears, there are several things that may help to route it. I am not giving any advice about these remedies here. That is for your doctor to prescribe. But common sense measures never conflict with dosage. And common sense says to do several things.

First of all, aid every eliminatory organ in the body to do its duty and more. A good physic is of course the first thing. We know castor oil and I do not know of anything better. If the doctor suggests another one follow his advice. Moreover, some children simply cannot keep castor oil down.

An Aid to Perspiration
The next thing is to help the skin pores to carry off toxins by perspiration. A good hot drink—we always go for hot lemonade—at bedtime is very efficacious. The child drinks it after he is undressed and ready for bed. Then he is rolled in a blanket, covered up in bed in a warm room an allowed to perspire. Hot drinks and blankets will usually do the work.

This helps to induce a heavy

"sweat." Care must be taken that the child does not take more cold now, as his pores are all open and the slightest chill will undo everything. Dry night clothes should be changed for dry ones. The room should be kept warm and no cold air allowed to blow on him in the night.

If there is any temperature (you should have your own thermometer and master the easy task of reading it), I can only advise you to put the child to bed at once and get in touch with the doctor. A "temperature" means more than just a common cold and should have professional advice and attention at once.

It was a jolly trip and the destination proved to be the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Weyant where all greatly enjoyed the "weenie roast," and the happy social evening.

LaGuardia Resents Tribune Editoria

Washington, March 23 — (AP)—Representative LaGuardia (Rep. N. Y.) today arose in the House on a point of personal privilege and denounced an editorial about him self in the Chicago Daily Tribune as "a cowardly attack."

LaGuardia, who with Representative Doughton (Dem., N. C.) an Representative Rankin (Dem. Miss) have led the fight against the sale tax provision in the revenue bill told the House that the editorials were "libelous and malicious."

He said that it described him as having an "alien mind," and spirit that showed little sympathy with American institutions, and that he was "willing to destroy the government."

"I do resent and protest against an attack of this kind," he said.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS.

A Philadelphia department store executive the other day announced that the America of the future will be a nation of players instead of workers.

Men will work three hours a day, he said, and play the rest of the time. There will be no hurry, no nervous strain, no rush, no poverty, no business depressions—everything, in fact, will be pretty nearly ideal.

The present is, perhaps, a rather unfortunate moment to be getting predictions of that kind. There are a good many millions of Americans today who ask nothing more of the future than that it give them a job—any kind of a job, with long hours and poor pay, if necessary, so long as it supports them.

But the interesting thing about it all is that there is a large measure of truth in this Philadelphia forecast.

That fact makes the existing depression more exasperating than any previous one; but it also makes it easier for people to tighten their belts and look to the future.

We are, right now, so far from the ideal state described above that we have around 8,000,000 unemployed. Yet it has been growing more clear every year that there is no solid, material reason why every item on that glittering program cannot be turned into a reality.

It is technically possible, today, for the nation's workmen to produce enough of everything, necessities and luxuries together, to go around, without working at anything like full capacity.

At the moment, that means misery, unemployment, want. But it can be translated into a tremendous opportunity. Sooner or later we shall find out how to turn our unparalleled productivity—the cause of most of our trouble today—into a genuine asset instead of a liability.

When that day comes, a program like the one outlined here will go into effect easily and naturally. It is physically possible right now. All that is needed is the proper kind of planning, the right kind of directing genius.

To be sure, the job won't be done overnight. But we need to cling to a realization of the fact that it can be done. A hope like that can make the business of waiting for prosperity a whole lot easier.

"WUXTREE."

From three cities—Annapolis, Md., and Dover and Dennison, O.—comes news that authorities have taken to curb the exuberance of newsboys who are too enthusiastically vocal in their retailing of "extras."

As to the wisdom, or otherwise, of this step there probably can be two opinions. But what is most interesting at the moment is that the news dispatches from these cities have, almost without exception, described the cry of the newsboy as "wuxtree!" And that is something worth thinking about.

Was there, since the first newspaper was run off, any newsboy anywhere who ever really said "wuxtree"? It is highly improbable. Newsboys, under the stress of hot competition, emit peculiar cries; but their rendition of the word "extra" is usually quite correct, except that they occasionally elide the last syllable. "Wuxtree" was invented by some cloistered soul in a dim library. Let's have no more of it.

It didn't take the Tynmites long to raise their voices, good and strong and shout to Driver Duncy. "Now, be careful how you drive. We will climb aboard and go with you, but you must promise you will not do a lot of crazy things. We want to end our trip alive."

"Don't worry," Duncy snapped. "I will see that you are as safe as safe can be. This bakery wagon's not so hard to steer. I am sure of that. And, too, the baker says his bound is sure to get to where he's bound. Each one of you just jump aboard and hang on to your hat."

Then, as the whole bunch quickly climbed inside, the friendly baker loudly cried, "Don't try to steer the dog. He knows the proper way to go. Just jerk the reins and about giddap! Then you can drop them in your lap. The trip may last a little while, because the dog runs slow."

"When you lads have sold everything, some right back here so you can bring the money you have collected for my pie and bread and little cakes. I'm going to wait right here for you. I know that nothing wrong you'll do. I'll time you from the time you start and see how long it takes."

Then Duncy very loudly cried, "All ready. We are set for our ride up to the little town nearby. Just keep an even sort of pace. We do not want to spill, because we're sitting rather high."

They traveled half an hour or so and then brave Scouty shouted, "Oh, I see the little village. We are on the outskirts now. Bring on the toys you want to buy the things we have brought. Oh, me oh my, I have sold a lot of things before, so I will show you how."

injury to the child, though the effects are not apparent at once.

For these reasons, one should not lightly dismiss a child's complaints about pains in joints or bones, and one should be on the look out for limps, or the abnormal function of any joint.

One not very common condition of this variety involves the hip joint. Technically it is known as pseudo-coxalgia. It is seen usually in children between the ages of 5 and 10.

The earliest symptoms are only those of a limp. Later there may be pain, and still later marked limitation of movement.

The condition is thought to result from an injury to the hip. The result is that the bony nucleus or core of the head of the long bone of the thigh is absorbed.

Only a cartilaginous shell remains, which under the influence of the body becomes flattened. Subsequently bone replaces the cartilage, but the bone is flattened out too, and does not fit in the socket.

The injury associated with pseudo-coxalgia can be kept at a minimum by an early diagnosis, and by keeping the body's weight off the affected leg.

This prevents flattening of the cartilaginous envelope, and distortion of the subsequent bone growth.

The skeletal frame of the child's body is relatively incomplete, in a growing state, and the bones have so-called epiphyseal lines at which growth in length takes place.

The bones, therefore, are neither as solid nor as continuous as in the adult.

This condition appears to make the child's bones more vulnerable to disease, and more easily subject to injury, because of the elasticity of the child's skeleton.

HINTS for HOME GARDENERS

This is the last of a series of articles on flower gardening written especially for NEA service and the Evening Telegraph.

By Dr. W. M. A. TAYLOR
Chief, Bureau of Plant Industry
U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The term "hardy," as applied to perennial plants, and the classifications "very hardy," "hardy," or "half hardy," and "tender," as applied to annual plants may some times confuse gardeners. As applied to herbaceous perennials, "hardy" ordinarily means the plant will survive usual winter conditions in the area under discussion.

For convenience in discussing these plants in Farmers' Bulletin 1381-F, "Herbaceous Perennials," F. L. Mulford of the Bureau of Plant Industry has divided the country in 32 regions or areas and a table indicates approximately the kind of summer and winter care required for perennial plants. Plants that are not hardy, either are not recommended for culture, or a note indicates the need for special winter protection. Nurserymen and plant dealers ordinarily give reliable information as to the hardiness of the plant material they offer.

The varying degrees of hardiness and tenderness of the annual flowering plants are usually noted in seed catalogs and on seed packets. Farmers' Bulletin 1171-F, "Growing Annual Flowering Plants," obtainable from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, also reports the relative hardiness of most of the common annuals.

Weather Bureau Aid
The Weather Bureau of the Department of Agriculture is the primary source of information in determining when and where to plant the seeds of annuals. The Weather Bureau will inform the gardener of the average date of the last killing frost in his locality, and this indicates planting procedure.

Very hardy annuals can be sown early, as soon as the frost is out of the ground, and before freezing weather is past, while the ground still freezes at night and thaws by day.

So hardy plants outdoors as soon as the ground is dry enough to work. They will stand frosts, but a hard late freeze may make it necessary to replant in some cases.

Half-hardy plants may be sown outdoors a week or two before the last frost may be expected with the expectation that they will not be above the ground much until the frost danger is past. If the Weather Bureau issues warning of a later than average frost, it is wise to cover them with paper or cloth to conserve the warmth of the soil. Tin cans as covers are of doubtful value. Transplanted plants in particular need effective frost protection unless they have been hardened effectively after culture indoors or in hotbeds.

Trees Act as Guide
Tender plants are susceptible to cold weather. They should not be planted outdoors until the ground is reasonably warm, and until there is considerable young foliage on the trees. If started indoors, as many of these are, they should not be transplanted for another ten days. The chrysanthemums are unusual in their hardiness. In the seedling stage they are distinctly tender, but many varieties are moderately hardy in the fall and endure light frosts.

Several of the tender annuals are tropical plants and require a long season for development so that it is essential to start them indoors or in hotbeds to get good development, particularly in the northern half of the country. A few of the more tender annuals are: ageratum, castor bean, the cockscombs, dahlias, four-o'clock, dwarf marigold, petunia, salpiglossis, scabiosa, and verbenas.

Explosion Wrecks W. Frankfort Store

West Frankfort, Ill., March 23—(UP)—An explosion of undetermined origin wrecked the West Frankfort Flour and Feed store structure here early today. The detonation was heard as far away as Benton and Johnson City.

Damage was estimated at $15,000. Scarcely a timber was left standing after the blast—debris being scattered for yards around. Groceries and stock feed were destroyed.

Tax Collections Exceed Estimates

New York, March 23—(AP)—A net loss of $9,965,000 for 1931 was reported today by the Texas Corporation, after taxes, interest, intangible development costs, depreciation amortization and other charges. This compares with net income for 1930 of $15,073,303, equivalent to $1.53 a share on the company's capital stock.

Gross operating earnings for the year amounted to $138,827,076 contrasted with $188,812,427 in 1930. In a statement to stockholders accompanying the report, R. C. Holmes, President of the company, said the unfavorable results were due to low prices of crude oil and products, but mainly to the lower price of gasoline both in the U. S. and abroad.

POET'S CORNER

GRIZZLED VETERAN OF THE BAR

(James W. Watts)

This grizzled veteran of the bar is known wherever lawyers are. His record through the fleeting years.

Would warrant even praise from peers.

There was a day when he began The legal phrases all to scan; And though I cannot tell the time, To him it was a day sublime.

He started out to study law, And all its kinks and puzzles saw; Whenever a problem came his way, He'd solve it, either night or day.

The whole wide country knew of him, Did any person call him "Jim"? At least, nobody would begrudge To ever term him as "The Judge."

His step is slower than before, It's hard to push the courthouse door; The human engine moves along, While heavy years proclaim their song.

Still, when a question does perplex, And many younger lawyers vex, To have it solved and rightly end, They see their aged lawyer-friend.

Although the head is heavy now, And furrowed is the bushy brow, Yet there remains a record clear, Or one who is a legal seer.

THOUGHTS AFTER A STORM

The Storm—King is abroad; his messengers,

The winds sweep o'er the earth with giant force,

And bear the soul up on their rushing wings,

Amid such scenes, it cannot be confined

Within the bounds of self, but must away,

To roam through space, and question of the clouds

And whirlwinds what may be its destiny?

It feels a sympathy with boundless power

And fierce impulsive stirrings fill it now,

That it never knows in quiet sunny hours;

For then earth seems so fair, we here would dwell

Content forever, but, when tempest come,

Their stern resistless might will rouse the mind

To grasp the higher joys than those of sense,

And make it own a kindred majesty

With things that thrill with fearful trembling,

Its inmost being. Then this mortal life

Appears a dream—a shadow; and the thought

Of all its vexing doubts and troublous cares

Is pitiful, compare with the vast strength

Of the immortal soul? What reck's it now
Of petty pains that makes existence seem
A bitterness? The hopes that failed; the love
Whose other name was sorrow; e'en the heart's
Deep yearning wish for truer, purer bliss
Than earth can give—the soul forgets all these.
Its hopes are high and holy, and no blight
Can fall on aught of nature so like Heaven;
Its love is infinite for it loves all
That God hath made in the wide universe,
And this wild longing for a nobler life
Is felt no more; it sees within itself
The elements of greatness, that shall need
Eternity for action. Oh I love
The night, and storms, whirlwinds, for they break
The spell of earliness that else would bind
The spirit down to dust?
Even as I write,
The storm has ceased, and silence fill the air,

IGOE AND PARTY ADDRESS LEE CO. DEMOCRATS HERE

Interesting Rally Is Held At Armory In Dixon on Last Eve

A well attended and enthusiastic meeting was held at the Armory hall last evening, at which time three Democratic candidates for state office and one for Congress from this district, addressed the voters on the issues of the campaign. Chief of these was Michael L. Igoe, of Chicago, minority leader of the House, who is one of the outstanding candidates for the Governorship of Illinois.

Meetings were conducted throughout the thirty-fifth district yesterday which were addressed by the various candidates and last evening meetings were held jointly at Sterling and Dixon. Attorney Sherwood Dixon presided at the opening of the Dixon meeting and introduced the first speaker, Scott W. Lucas of Havana, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, and former state commander of the American Legion.

The speaker outlined his program of economic restoration and relief in his platform consisting of the following outstanding principles: Enforcement of the principles of the McNary-Haugen bill in lieu of the unworkable farm bill; reduction of the tariff; repeal of the eighteenth amendment; elimination of bureaucracy in national government and reduced taxation, destruction of organized crime, and the election of a Democratic president in 1932.

Introduced By Devine
Representative John P. Devine introduced the main speaker of the evening, Michael L. Igoe of Chicago, Democratic candidate for the governorship. In his opening remarks, the speaker paid a fine tribute to Representative Devine, with whom he has been associated in the legislature since 1913, stating that the Dixon attorney was efficient, energetic, able and one of the most active members of the legislature.

The speaker prophesied that 1932 was a Democratic year, when a referendum will be taken on the national administration with a belief that conditions under a Democratic administration would be no worse than at present and he urged strict adherence to Democratic principles, and not to things undemocratic.

"Some members of the Democratic party are acting in an undemocratic way in attempting to dictate a slate which does violence to the free action of the voters of Illinois in selecting candidates for the party and in violation of the primary law," the candidate said.

He briefly discussed the qualifications of the Democratic candidates for the governorship of Illinois. In presenting his qualification, Representative Igoe said:

All-State Candidate
"I am not the Chicago or Cook county candidate, nor am I the down-state candidate. I am the candidate of the entire state of Illinois and not for any portion of it."

He reviewed the activity of Mayor Cermak of Chicago in his attempt to dictate the Democratic slate of Illinois and in conclusion said he stood for the reduction of taxation through the enforcement of the revenue laws of the state.

Rev. Edward S. Nichols, candidate for Congress from this district, who resides near Oregon, was introduced and spoke very briefly of this campaign.

Judge Truman H. Snell of Carlinville, candidate for Attorney General of Illinois, held the attention of his listeners as he exposed the alleged action of Mayor Cermak of Chicago in an attempt to force a Democratic ticket of his own selection upon the voters of Illinois, which, he said, would, if elected, control a large majority of the state appointments.

MINISTER WHO ELOPED WITH GIRL INSANE

Jury In Sanity Hearing Sends Rev. L. G. Beers To Asylum

Harrisburg, Ill., Mar. 24 —(UP)—A strange romance with a girl 30 years his junior today sent the Rev. Lester G. Beers, 47, former pastor of a fashionable Methodist church to a state insane asylum after his scriptural quotations failed to convince a jury of his sanity.

The former pastor of the Signal Hill Methodist church at Belleville was ordered removed for observation and treatment at the Anna state asylum after two minutes deliberation by a six-man jury which included two physicians.

From the Bible from which he had taken texts for his weekly sermons, Beers read Matthew, which he claimed justified his love for Miss Serena Weil, 17.

"But if any man think that he behaveth himself uncomely toward his virgin, let him do what he will; he sinneth not," the pastor read from First Corinthians, seventh chapter.

Action to declare the minister insane was sought by his family when Miss Weil's father took out a warrant for his arrest on Mann Act charges after Beers visited in Missouri and Kansas with the girl.

Evidence was introduced showing the pastor had purchased costly jewelry and silk lingerie for her. His friends persuaded Beers to enter a hospital for treatment. While there, Beers admitted, he corresponded with the girl. In the letters he was called "Big Boy" and she signed herself "Sugar."

"I love the girl better than anything in the world," Beers said. "I love my wife and three children, also, but it is a different kind of love. If I am cured of my insanity, I would like to re-enter the ministry." The chief witness against Beers was Dr. W. M. Whitlock, Superintendent of the East St. Louis district of the Methodist church.

SPORT BRIEFS

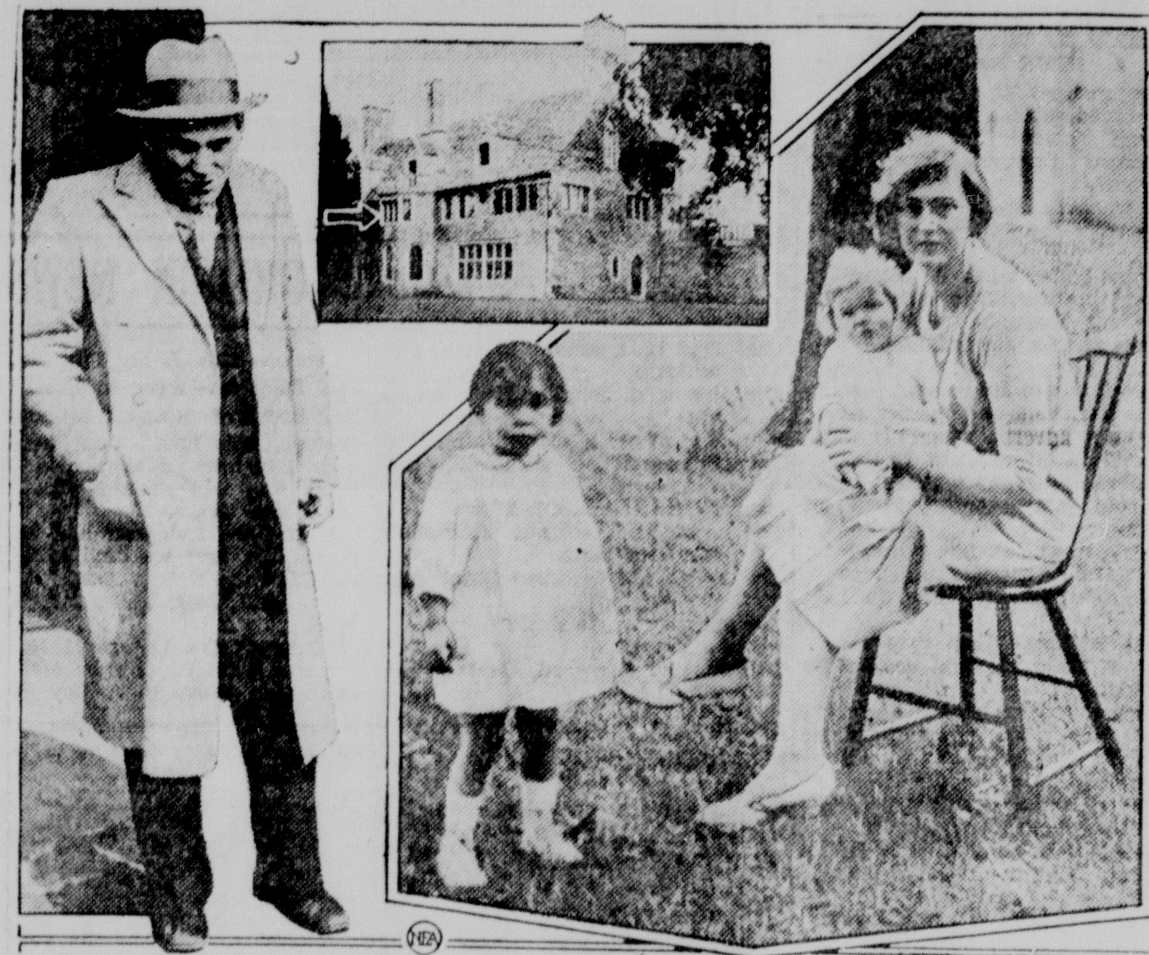

Chicago, March 24 —(AP)—As a tune-up for the summer campaigns the middlewestern golfers have scheduled a three-day tournament at French Lick, Ind., April 8 to 10. All of Chicago's ranking golfers, together with those in Indiana, Illinois and Ohio, plan to compete.

Southern Pines, N. C. Mar. 24 —(AP)—The battle for the mid-south women's golf championship appeared to lie between Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, and Miss Bernice Wall of Oshkosh, Wis., today as the second and final 18 hole round of the tournament started. Mrs. Hill turned in an 81, while Miss Wall took 83 yesterday.

Scores were kept high by strong winds, which interfered with the long shots and swept the sand from the greens.

Chicago, —(UP)—C. M. Osborne, Lacrosse, withdrew today as one of the officials for the University of Illinois finals of the state high school basketball tournament. R. L. Ashley, Riverside, was named in his place. Osborne was unable to work because of an infected hand. A. J. Bergstrom, Casey, and H. H. Sutherland, Willard, have been away from the ring for ten years. Recently, when ordered to show cause why he had not paid a civil judgment the former champion, said his various real estate and meat market ventures had failed and that he was broke.

In New Kidnaping Scare Near Lindbergh Estate

At Highland Park, N. J., less than 20 miles from the Lindbergh estate, an intruder used methods similar to those of the Lindbergh kidnapers in trying to enter the nursery in the home of J. The arrow shows the window against which a ladder had been placed. erland, Bloomington are the other officials.

Havana, —(AP)—Isidro Ribas of Spain finally has been crowned as the world's trick-shot billiards champion after a long match with Charles C. Peterson of St. Louis which was carried on in four cities in the United States before winding up in Havana.

Blocks of 100 shots were played in each of the five cities and at the end, Ribas had a margin of 65 points.

Iowa, City, Ia. —(AP)—The personnel of the University of Iowa's revamped assistant football coaching staff was still shrouded in uncertainty today.

Following a meeting of the athletic board last night at which the selection of assistants to Ossie Solem was discussed, Dr. E. H. Lauer, Athletic Director, said that "new blood will be added to the coaching staff," although he declined to name those under consideration.

Glendale, Calif. —(AP)—Jess Willard, now 49 years old and tipping the scales at 300 pounds, is contemplating a return to the ring. The former heavyweight boxing champion said today he planned to go in training immediately.

He seeks four round exhibition bouts with Jack Johnson, from whom he won the title in 1915 and Jack Dempsey, to whom he lost it in 1919.

Willard has been away from the ring for ten years. Recently, when ordered to show cause why he had not paid a civil judgment the former champion, said his various real estate and meat market ventures had failed and that he was broke.

HAFETY TO STAY AT HOME UNTIL HE GETS BOOST

Says He'll Not Play Ball This Summer At Lower Wage

Berkeley, Calif., March 24 —(UP)—Chick Hafey, bespectacled batting champion of the National League in 1931, today voiced a resolve to "stay home all summer" unless the St. Louis Cardinals accede to his demands for bigger pay.

The champion batter, who rapidly is becoming champion holdout as well, glanced appraisingly at the contracts awarded Hack Wilson, Bill Terry, Babe Herman and others, and then told his side of the story.

"When I have a bad year I expect to take a cut," he said. "But the batting averages of these fellows dropped 40 or 50 points last year while I raised mine 13 or 14 points, and still they are getting more money than the Cards offered me."

"Goeh, it seems I should get a raise after having one of my best seasons."

Hafey began his negotiations with the Red Bird moguls by asking for a two-year contract at $17,000 a year. He sent back the contract they offered him, calling for $12,500, the same money he drew last year. They countered with a $500 raise, whereupon Hafey cut his contract bid to one year.

"That was three weeks ago and I haven't heard anything since. I'll stay here until they meet my terms or sell me down the river."

Hafey is confident that one or the other will happen pretty soon. In preparation for an active season—with what club he hasn't the faintest idea—he is working out daily with local semi-pros.

Although he wears glasses, he still has the unerring vision that has helped him to show the way to all National Leaguers, batting .3489 last year.

Hafey regards the New York Giants as the strongest opposition to the world champion Cardinals. Competition in the league will be keener for every club, and the Red Birds will not have those set-ups with Cincinnati, to help the percentage, he said. Last year the Cards beat Cincinnati 22 out of 23 games.

"Sending Burleigh Grimes to Chicago will hurt the Cards' chances," Hafey said. "The Cards are counting on three rookies hurlers to win Grimes' games, but that may be hard to do."

College Swimmers Prepare For Meet

Ann Arbor, Mich., Mar. 24 —(AP)—The high board above the University of Michigan swimming pool bounced and groaned today as fancy divers from the east, west and central United States practiced to get the "feel" of the board before tomorrow's preliminaries to the National Intercollegiate swimming meet.

Mickey Riley of University of Southern California, who won the title last year with 134.04 points, will be present to defend his championship.

The change to the 10-foot board was made because competition in Olympic games in fancy diving is from the high board.

Riley may expect keen opposition from Dick Degener, Michigan sophomore; Schick of Illinois, Griebisch and Fog of Wisconsin, Southernland of Nebraska, and Rucker of California.

An added feature of the 1932 national meet will be the 1,500 meter swim, finals of which will be run off Friday afternoon.

Michigan, defending her team title, will be watching Northwestern, Stanford and Princeton for closest opposition among the 19 challenging schools. Northwestern has entered 15 men, the largest contingent to invade Ann Arbor for the meet.

U. S. Tennis Stars Defeat Frenchmen

New York, Mar. 24 —(AP)—The United States captured the title and the trophy in the international indoor tennis team matches with France but once more Jean Borotra, the veteran bounding Basque, showed himself to be the idol of the fans as well as a player who must be reckoned with in any kind of competition.

America won by the margin of three matches to two and it was the 34-year-old Borotra who won both of France's victories. He defeated Frank Shields handily in one singles match Monday then concluded the series last night by trouncing Gregory Mangin, the national indoor champion from Newark, in four sets after Shields had clinched the American victory by beating Christian Boussus.

358 KNOWN DEAD IN SOUTH AFTER MONDAY'S STORM

Relief Agencies Push Work To Succor The Many Homeless

Birmingham, Ala., Mar. 24 —(AP)—Relief agencies and neighbors of the stricken lent a hand of mercy to the south's tornado victims today as the death list grew to 358.

Survivors worked with the American Red Cross, the American Legion and other organizations to bury the dead, care for the injured, house the homeless and launch a program to rehabilitate the devastated regions.

The Red Cross established relief headquarters here and authorized eight centers of operations over the storm area after the arrival of Dr. William De Gleine, General Medical Advisor, and C. W. Downing of the Washington office.

Field representatives pushed into the less accessible communities dashed flat by the freakish winds of Monday night to survey damage and determine the amount of aid needed.

An appeal for contributions was broadcast here last night after relief workers conferred and estimated from $150,000 to $200,000 would be required for immediate needs of the storm victims.

Today the death list by states showed: Alabama 298; Georgia 37; Tennessee 18; South Carolina 3, and Kentucky 2.

Waif Of Storm Is Still Unidentified

Clanton, Ala., March 24 —(UP)—Monday night an 18-months-old baby girl was found in the tornado zone near Thorsby. Today she was still homeless and nameless—a waif of the storm.

Since she was picked up in a deserted cotton field, she has been sleeping and staring at strangers—and whimpering only a little—in Dr. Arthur Johnston's infirmary.

More than 500 refugees and Clanton residents have hung over the white crib. Each one shook his head. No one knows who the child is.

When an ambulance from Clanton slipped off the road near Thorsby Monday night the driver and his assistant heard a cry. The cotton field was empty except for a white spot, which turned out to be the baby. Not another person, not even a house was in sight.

Barber To Put Big Sum In Circulation

Towanda, Pa., March 24 —(UP)—Tom Fitzgerald, "15 and 5 barber" planned today to put $10,200 of hoarded wealth into circulation. Fitzgerald found a rusted key in an old mud in a battered trunk in the attic of his home. He found the key fitted an old chest of drawers. In the drawers were sacks of gold pieces and tightly wadded rolls of bills. It required six hours to count the money.

Tom lost little time in informing his cousin, Mary Dalton, of his discovery. Together they planned a trip to Ireland.

The money, they decided, had been accumulated by Tom's mother, who died two years ago at the age of 96. She distrusted banks.

Fitzgerald announced plans for closing the barber shop where he cut hair for 15 cents and shaved patrons for a nickel. He also offered for sale the family cow.

Sidelights In News In Capital Of United States

BY UNITED PRESS

Washington, Mar. 24—Charles G. Dawes, president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has gained great fame for his underslung pipes. But the spectacles of Eugene Meyer, his conferee in the Finance Corporation and Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, have been overlooked.

Meyer has 20 pair of spectacles. He keeps eight at his office.

An even dozen remain at home. He usually has three pair with him—one on his nose and a couple in his pockets. His spectacles are of all kinds. When the public sees him he usually wears pince-nez with a black ribbon. But when he secludes himself in his office for a long pull at his desk he dons heavy tortoise shell rimmed spectacles which are easier on the nose. Then he has another heavy pair for golf, big ones for motoring, and rimless and fine, white-gold rimmed ones for formal wear.

Recently he had the prescription for his lenses changed. He had a dozen sets of lenses made up in the first order. They cost $84. He has given them a try-out and likes them. So now he is having eight more sets made.

Dawes' pipe collection outnumbers Meyer's spectacles considerably.

It numbered 74 pipes at last count. Most of them are the famous Dawes underslung variety. But not all. There are nine fine English pipes given him by various friends he made while he was in London as Ambassador to the Court of St. James. Dawes is particularly fond of them. He likes to show them and can tell you that "so-and-so gave me this one" and "this is the one I smoked" at such-and-such a function. He points with especial pride to one he used while on an archeological expedition in France. It's all marked and scratched from hard usage.

Another favorite Dawes calls his "collegiate pipe." It is a small-bowled, prettily-shaped affair, given him by a friend in Chicago, and there are many others—big pipes, little pipes, and pipes with amazingly long stems.

Speaker of the House Garner noted that the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, Chaplain, has a habit of standing on one foot when he says the morning prayer in the House. He asked the Rev. Montgomery why that was.

"It seems strange," chided Montgomery, "that your attention should be upon my feet when I pray."

But the next day, in the midst of the prayer, Montgomery apparently thought of what Garner had said. He suddenly corrected his position, and planted both feet firmly on the floor.

HOW SECRET SIX WARS RACKETEERING

City Awakes To Menace Of Gangs

By ALEXANDER JAMIE
Director of the "Secret Six" of the Chicago Association of Commerce
Written Especially for NEA Service and The Evening Telegraph

America's big cities must curb racketeering.
If we don't stop this weedy growth that is now flourishing around the roots of our commercial system, business in general will some day be in the hands of organized hoodlums just as certain lines of business are already in their hands at the present time.

Racketeering — by which honest merchants are intimidated into paying bounty to criminal organizations by threats of bombing and the like — is growing.

True, some of the little rackets are fading out of the picture as the results of the general depression, but the real honest-to-goodness big shot rackets are still thriving.

I hesitate to estimate the toll they are now collecting, because it would be only a guess. But I am sure that it runs into box car figures.

There are many ways by which criminals force honest merchants to "join" their fake "organizations" and pay the protection money that goes with this. Bombing of a business establishment is only one way. Fires are started, acid and dyes are thrown on valuable stocks, machinery is damaged, strikes are engineered and sabotage practiced in many other ways.

AUTOS RUINED—
In Chicago, truck owners who did not pay tribute to the gangs have found their radiators rashed with an ax. Others have had their motors ruined by someone secretly putting shellac instead of oil in the engine.

There are, also, active rackets in the labor unions. I believe that certain of the labor unions that are now suffering most from this evil will eventually be destroyed if the honest members of these unions do not take steps to protect themselves and their organizations, by kicking out the crooks now in control.

My opinion is that the average union labor man does not want that kind of leadership, and yet in many cases these racketeer labor leaders have fastened themselves in positions of power where they cling like leeches. Such men are the gravest menace to the success and growth of union labor in America.

Of course, all unions have not suffered from this racket. Most of them have been able to keep their organization clean of hoodlum domination. These labor unions should protect what they now have; the other unions must clean house to live.

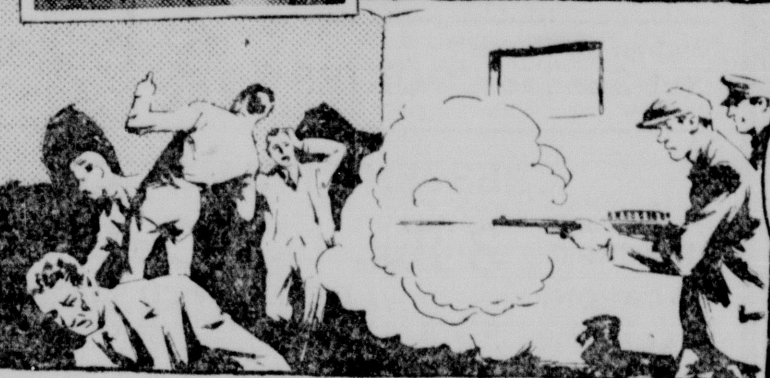

Chicago has had many rackets, but the newest is in the interstate trucking business. It was demanded that truck shipments be delivered to a terminal in Chicago, and not delivered direct to the consignee. The success of such a move would cost shippers and merchants millions of dollars yearly—and needlessly.

SECRET SIX FORMED—
The Secret Six was formed by the Chicago Association of Commerce to aid the authorities in combating organized crime of all kinds, and many racketeering cases have been investigated by our organization. Such matters are handled by trained men in one of our several departments, and their work has been of great benefit in combating this form of extortion.

Going back a little into the history of the Secret Six, I should explain that the idea for the organization really had its birth in the machine gun massacre of seven anti-Capone gangsters on St. Valentine's Day, in 1929. That crime shocked the city and emphasized to business leaders that something must be done for the improvement of law and order in Chicago.

Law abiding Chicago citizens had become accustomed to seeing organized criminals thrive and evince unprecedented prosperity, had also watched them collude with dishonest officials and mock honest agents of the law, but prior to that time there was not much inclination to do anything about it.

began a campaign for a business men's organization to fight Chicago's crime. He persistently urged that time for drastic action by Chicago business men was at hand. But other business leaders on whose legitimate activities hoodlum incursions had not become so obviously manifest—demurred. "The gangsters are killing only rival gangsters which is good riddance," they said. "Let the gangsters alone and they will soon exterminate themselves." Early in 1930 a construction engineer was shot in the back while engaged in building a new hospital at the University of Chicago campus. This crime was laid at the door of the labor racket. That act of murder was interpreted by business men as the challenge of a defiant underworld and gave impetus to the plans of the Association of Commerce for organized retaliation.

BITTER WAR OPENED—
The gun, whose bark had not even distracted intent students from their pursuit of knowledge, had fired the initial shot in a war between Chicago's business men and Chicago's gangs that is still going on today.

The Secret Six, more properly known as the Committee on the Prevention and Punishment of Crime, was formed by the Chicago Association of Commerce, with Colonel Randolph as its chairman. Though Colonel Randolph's term as president of the organization has since expired, he is still chairman of the Secret Six and its only known committee member. I have been the director, or head of the committee's investigating forces, from the start.

The name Secret Six is really a misnomer. When the committee of business men was formed to combat crime, Colonel Randolph was asked how many members the committee would contain. Careful then as now, not to reveal the secrets of the organization, Colonel Randolph replied: "That is hard to say, maybe 150 members, maybe only six members." For the lack of a better name, the newspaper reporters termed our organization "The Secret Six."

Our organization assists the duly constituted law enforcement agencies—such as the police department, the sheriff's office and the state's attorney's office, also the various federal law enforcement bureaus—and helps in any way it can to coordinate their work to bring about the detection and punishment of organized criminals.

The Secret Six is supported by voluntary subscriptions of Chicago business men. Through our investigators we have been very successful in getting evidence in a large number of cases that have led to the clearing up of crimes and convictions in the courts. We employ a staff of trained investigators, many of whom were formerly identified with federal and other law enforcing agencies.

Tomorrow: The steady rise of racketeering by organized criminal gangs and how it menaces business—Labor racketeering and its menace to honest union men.

FOR years railroads, and the larger telegraph and telephone companies have known through experience that creosoted sturdy Southern Yellow Pine, full length under pressure, adds tremendously to the years of service, lowers maintenance costs and offers greater resistance to fire and water. We recommend this same Southern Yellow Pine, creosoted full length under pressure, for use in your fence lines. You can identify these Long-Bell creosoted fence posts by the Silver Spot.

Film Actress Was "Dead" Twelve Years

Budapest, March 24—(UP)—Lya de Putti, film actress who died recently in New York, was "dead" for 12 years to her husband and her two daughters until her husband, Zoltan von Szepeffy, committed suicide in a Budapest hotel.

At the cemetery, following his own wishes his body was placed beside a grave bearing the inscription "Lya de Putti—died 1920." Only then did the actress' daughters, Ilona, 11, and Judith, 14, learn that their mother had been alive until recently.

Zoltan von Szepeffy, a court official, had the stone placed when Lya de Putti left his home to follow the stage. He felt the loss so deeply that he always referred to his wife in the past tense, and told his daughters she was dead, although he received frequent messages about her from friends in America. Von Szepeffy's grief, and the hurt to his pride, finally led to his suicide. He never gave up hope that the temperamental girl would return to him.

Contrary to what many believed, Lya de Putti was not a stage name. It was her maiden name.

Buses Not Hit By Texas "Crow" Law

Austin Texas, March 24—(UP)—Negroes cannot be segregated from white persons in motor buses, the state Court of Criminal Appeals has held.

"It may be equally desirable to segregate passengers on buses," said the court in holding the "Jim Crow" law does not apply to buses,

"it may be unfortunate that the legislature did not provide for such a contingency, but it failed to include buses in the law that applies to trains, streetcars and interurbans."

The ruling was given in reversing the case of Sadie Patillo, who had been convicted in Beaumont of riding in the "white" part of a bus.

Windsor, Ont., March 24—(UP)—Astonished clerks yesterday recorded the birth of a son to Frank A. Winters, 83—his fourth child born to his present wife, married seven years ago.

Undaunted by the gangs of clerks Winters walked to the office next door and formally applied for a provincial old age pension.

Senate To Fix Duck Shortage Cause and Cure

Washington.—The Senate Special Committee on Conservation of Wildlife Resources will hold a hearing on April 4, 5 and 6 to pin down the numerous views prevailing in the country on the waterfowl shortage and why it exists and how to remedy it.

Four hundred authorities have been invited to testify before the committee. These include a representative from each of the conservation organizations throughout the nation and the fish and game or conservation commissions of the states, as well as scientists who have made special studies of the waterfowl situation and individuals who have taken particular interest in the problem.

With at least one waterfowl restoration plan ready for presentation before Congress to meet the reported emergency, the committee will attempt at the hearing to disclose definitely.

To what extent there is a shortage in migratory waterfowl, particularly ducks and geese.

The underlying causes for this shortage, if it exists.

Remedies the federal government can apply which will assist in restoring the waterfowl population.

The extent to which the states can assist in such restoration.

How the sportsmen themselves may best contribute toward increasing waterfowl.

The bill which by that time is expected to be formerly in the committee's hands would place a cent-a-shell tax on shotgun ammunition, with a rebate to trapshooters.

This plan, sponsored by the More Game Birds in America Foundation of New York, was selected recently by a special way and means committee of sportsmen, appointed under authority of the 1931 American Game Conference, as the most feasible method for financing the restoration of duck nesting, resting and feeding areas.

The American Game Association, which suggested a $1 federal license for migratory bird hunters, will be represented at the hearing.

When Geography Plays 'April Fool'

Washington, D. C.—What is the distance from New York to Boston? Eight miles!

This statement has the earmarks of an April fool joke, but the National Geographic Society, in a bulletin from its Washington D. C., headquarters, points out that it is correct—in England. England, too, has a New York and a Boston, both Lincolnshire villages, and eight miles of open fenland separate them.

"Place-names, boundaries, distances, products, and other geographical features constantly play April fool with all of us," the bulletin continues. "It seems absurd to ask: 'Which has the longer sea coast, Alaska or the United States?' Yet geography shows that Alaska, with a total area only twice that of Texas, is far ahead—with 15,132 miles to 12,877 for the United States proper."

Farthest South

"The amazing development of foreign trade and tourist travel since the World War has given added importance to geographical exactness. Ask the average person to name the southernmost points of the South American and African continents, and the answers will likely be 'Cape Horn' and 'Cape of Good Hope.' Yet Cape Horn is on a very tiny island, 150 miles south of the continental mainland, and the Cape of Good Hope is about 100 miles northwest of Cape Agulhas, the extreme southern tip of Africa."

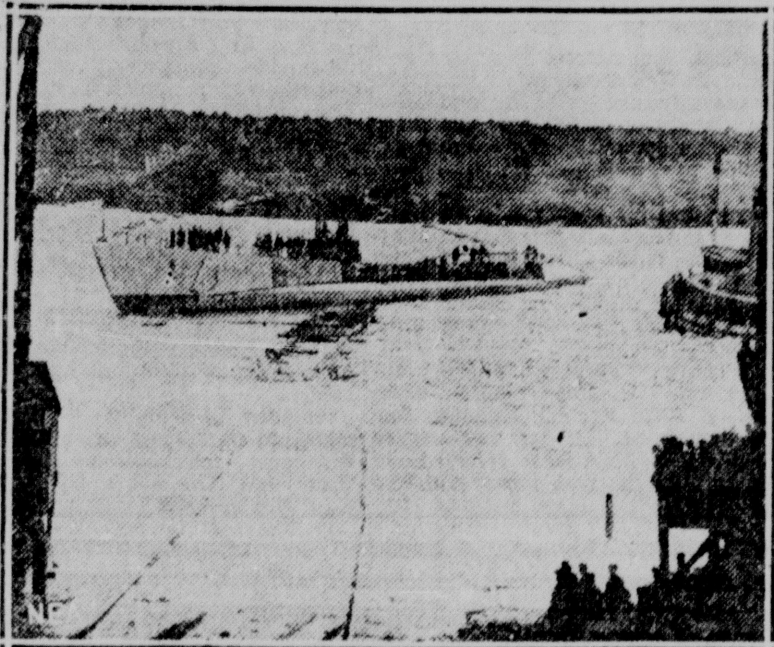

"Most modern ships 'round the Horn' by sailing through the Strait of Magellan, which winds many miles north of the Cape. Few living persons have seen Cape Horn, not only because it is off the steamer routes, but also because it is usually shrouded in fog. The actual southernmost point of the South American continent is Cape Froward, on the Brunswick peninsula."

"Geographical exactness becomes dollars and cents for steamship companies. A captain in Buenos Aires with a cargo that would sell equally well in Jacksonville, Florida, or St. Johns, Newfoundland, would naturally choose the nearer point to save fuel. Strange as it may seem, St. Johns would be his choice. The Newfoundland capital is 130 miles nearer Buenos Aires than is Jacksonville, although the Florida city is more than 2,300 miles farther down the Atlantic coast in the direction of South America. The overhang of the north Atlantic coast places St. Johns far enough east to account for the difference."

Rivers, Too, Play April Fool

"Rivers, too, have a habit of playing April Fool. The Rio Grande is a notorious cut-up in this respect. In flood times it eats away its banks as though they were brown sugar, often forcing new channels across narrow necks where the stream loops. When this happens the land cut off is thrust into an alien jurisdiction. Many a river-bank resident has gone to sleep in the United States and found himself in Mexico the next morning.

"Don't answer this one too quickly. On which side of the Missouri river is Kansas City, Missouri, and on which side is Kansas City, Kansas? Both lie on the south bank, although it is customary to speak of 'crossing the river' when going from one to the other. The river in question, however, is the Kansas river, which partially separates the two cities."

"Because bananas grow on stalks which often stand as high as a three-story building they are said to grow on trees." The banana, however, is really an herb, reaching its full height in one season. Bamboo, which provides 'wood' for Chinese homes and bridges, is a grass. Coffee, often referred to as 'a cup of Java,' comes mostly from Brazil, but it is a native of Ethiopia (Abyssinia). Washington's famous Japanese cherry trees, superb scenic assets, produce no cherries. China uses the 'Mexican dollar' for coinage, but Mexico has no coin called a 'dollar'—the peso and centavo being the official units of value below the Rio Grande.

Place-Names Colorful

Place-names often make a place appear to be what it 'ain't.' Iceland, for instance, has little ice, but it has a great deal of natural steam heat from its many hot springs and geysers. Greenland, as is well known, is not green, but the largest ice bowl in the world, with only a strip of mountainous coast line exposed. In Africa, Spain has a colony called Rio de Oro, its name meaning River of Gold. But Rio de Oro has neither rivers nor gold."

CO-OPERATION

TAND off by yourself in your dreaming.
And all of your dreams are vain;
No grandeur of soul or spirit
Can man by himself attain.
It is willed we shall dwell as brothers.
As brothers then we must toil;

And each who would see accomplished,
The dreams that he's proud to won,
Must strive for the goal with his fellows.

Bi-Centennial Influences Easter Cards

The Bi-Centennial influence, already apparent in everything from clothes to housewares and from parties to millinery, even stretches out its Colonial fingers to the 1932 Easter cards. Its manifestations, however, are surprisingly versatile. In the first place, of course, there is a noticeable use of red and blue, neither of them usual Easter-card hues. Then, too, there is a wide vogue for yellow—not by any means the ordinary yellow, but a real Colonial yellow.

Silhouettes are markedly in favor. Many are in the traditional black and white or yellow; others adopt a clear light green with white; most popular of all are varied combinations of white and yellow, with the silhouette effect sometimes achieved by cut-outs in a yellow sheet with a white underlay.

Other unmistakable signs of the Bi-Centennial trend are the frequent recurrence of figures in the garb of Washington's time; designs rendered with the quaint block simplicity of the old-time prints; and still other designs in cross-stitch effect, suggestive of actual samplers.

For the Modernists

If you happen to be definitely a modernist, however, there are plenty of new Easter designs to suit this preference. Nothing in the way of those bizarre cubes and triangles, of course. They are positively old-fashioned nowadays. But modernism continues in the ascendant just the same. For instance, there are cards in brightly vivid colorings, with sharp contrast of red and blue, yellow and purple, and of course, black and figures in costumes of the type identified with the "balalaika." Other designs, after the manner of the modern French school, are toned to less emphatic color contrasts of rose and turquoise, jade and violet, with formalized renderings of garden vistas and lovely ladies who might have stepped from the court of the Grand Monarch, Louis XIV himself. Still other designs in the modernist mood confine themselves to conventionalized flower groups.

Casual and Informal

Quite a few of the cards this year go in for being pretty casual and informal. This is by way of being a new departure for Easter greetings, which have hitherto taken themselves rather seriously. There are any number of line-drawings of the "thumb-nail" type, with all the insouciance of an impromptu pen-and-ink sketch. These black and whites, by the way, have a fondness for accenting themselves with yellow or pink, and when they say pink they mean just that. Not any of those upstart new shades like rose centre or opaline, but a good, old-fashioned pink, the kind your best girl used to wear in a sash around her waist back in the '90's.

In keeping with the informal tone of these designs, many of them leave the inside page of the booklet blank so that the sender may write a personal note of greeting. Others use a simple script to express their seasonal sentiments. One such card, showing on the outside two amusing little figures exchanging "Easter Greetings," writes within merely the words: "From me to you."

In More Serious Vein

The water-thinness of the new goya paper lends itself to exquisite delicate cards of more serious vein. Almost invariably the goya paper is used in pure white, carrying a design in silver, with touches of pastel floral colors. Parchment fold-ers are also widely used. Cards of religious inspiration especially, always numerous at Easter-time, find either parchment or goya paper an effective background. One on goya, shows the cross outlined in silver as a background to a spray of tulips in rose and green and silver. Within, lettered in silver, is a verse from Matthew. Quite as much in favor as the flower-decked cross are exquisitely restrained renderings of the stained-glass church-window motif.

Humorous Cards

When it comes to humorous cards as such, Easter seems to be the "out time" of the year when there aren't, at least not of the flip or wise cracking variety. The hoary jokes about Easter bunnies and spring colds are definitely out-moded. Amusing little animal cards supply the 1932 brand of Easter humor. A nonchalant worm with a silk topper and a walking-stick rises before two obviously amazed chicks to announce: "Just popped up to say 'Happy Easter'."

Envelopes

Linings are in again. Envelopes, which at Valentine's Day did a volte face from all previous allegiance to linings, apparently were merely taking a breathing spell while they prepared to spring—no pun intended—their Easter surprises. Easter cards, which as a general thing have almost unanimously favored white and unlined envelopes, or at most, restrained linings, of gold or delicate solid-color tissues, now often display themselves against the gayest of linings. One garden design card espouses a lining of the new yellow figured in generous gold blocks interspersed with black silhouettes. Another gay lining is in turquoise with a tracery of gold and silver.

History of Easter Observance

The first Easter cards of the new message variety appeared about 1908. These early designs usually consisted of a simple "Easter Greetings" printed in one corner of a floral card. The name "Easter" however, dates from even before the Christian era, being a survival of the old Teutonic mythology which identified Eostre or Ostara as the goddess of Spring. In spite of the current religion the New Testament nor in the writings of the Apostolic Fathers is there any indication of the observance of the Easter festival. It was soon accorded recognition, however, and according to a regulation of Constantine, was to be the first day of the year.

The perennial symbols of Easter—the gay-colored eggs, the hares and the lamb—are almost as old as the day itself. According to ancient Persian beliefs the world was hatched from an egg at the season of the year corresponding to the vernal equinox. In the early days of the Christian era priests and holy men blessed dyed Easter eggs which were then kept as amulets which supposedly brought good fortune. Even in these modern times in some of the significance of the day, neither in more remote districts of France the priest at Easter is given colored eggs in return for blessing the home. The rolling of the Pesche, or Pace, egg, one of the oldest recorded customs, survives in a variety of Easter observances and games.

The hare as an Easter motif is explained by the fact that the hare since earliest antiquity was supposed to be a symbol of the moon and the date on which Easter is to fall is determined by the moon. In Germany the children are told that the Easter hare steals into the house on the eve of Easter and leaves bright-hued eggs as a reward for their good behavior during the year. In England various forms of "hunting the hare" were long observed at Easter.

Women Argue Over "Equal Rights" In Senate Committee

By BESS FURMAN

Washington, March 23.—(AP)—Organized women—three scores strong—invaded the austere chambers of the House Judiciary committee today and ranged themselves on opposite sides of the movement to put an equal rights amendment in the Constitution.

All the witnesses were women, excepting Rep. Ludlow (D.) Indiana sponsor of the amendment.

"The first stronghold taken in the battle was the stronghold of equal suffrage," Ludlow said. "Now they are moving on to capture the second stronghold which will make their emancipation complete—the stronghold of 'equal rights.'"

"It is proposed to sponge out of our state statutes the monstrous falsehood that there should be a double standard of morals with legal escapes for the male delinquent and legal penalties for the women who are caught in sin."

Mrs. Rebecca Greathouse, Assistant United States Attorney in the District of Columbia, flailed the Supreme Court, saying it, "in its conservative way, always interprets the rights of women under the common law of 1788, when the Constitution was adopted. We have no rights under the Constitution except suffrage."

Mrs. Jane N. Smith of New York testified "we believe all industrial legislation should apply to men and women alike. It is almost impossible to secure equality from state legislatures. I know because I have worked with the New York legislature."

Miss Josephine Casey, field worker with women labor, was bitter against "the perfect ladies who want to protect the working girl—protect her 'out on her ear'."

Miss Margaret Lueres endorsed the new amendment on behalf of the younger members of the National Women's party. Then Miss Edith Weber, actress, said the absurdity of restricted working hours for women would be evident. "If at 10 o'clock at night in the theater it was announced a man would take the heroine's part so she could go home to bed."

Mrs. William J. Carson, Philadelphia, of the National League of Women Voters, led the opposition. Reasons she gave:

"That it is unnecessary since undesirable discriminations not only can be removed without a federal amendment but are being continually so removed."

"That it is undesirable to interfere with the states' rights principle of our federal form of government."

"That it is undesirable to make every case involving a differentiation between men and women a federal question that can ultimately be settled only by the Supreme Court."

"That no definition of 'equal rights' is contained in the amendment and that this would result in confusion."

One of the best ways to relax

GLORIFYING YOURSELF by ALICIA HART

© 1931 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

When strain comes, as it so often does in every single day of a busy life, you literally "take it in the neck."

That is to say, those muscles at the back of your neck grow tense, almost rigid. This stops the flow of blood up into your head, strains your eyes and tenses your facial muscles. You show it in your face, but you take it in the neck!

Learn to relax your neck. That is the secret of a lot of poise you meet. A woman who can take five minutes off and relax all of those muscles has the power for beauty within her grasp.

If your neck is perfectly relaxed, you can stand up, bend your head over, take your right hand and push your head up by pushing your forehead, and when you take your hand away your head will just bob down onto your chest again and swing like a pendulum in smaller and smaller arcs until it comes to rest.

Only about one woman in a thousand has this perfectly relaxed neck. Dancers know how to do it. Few others do.

One of the best ways to relax

your neck it to lie prone upon the floor and work out your spine by wriggling it along the floor, this way and that, the way a cat does. Then straighten it all out, by pushing yourself up out of your hips. Next do the exercise that throws your feet up over your head to touch the floor.

These exercises relax the whole spine. It is impossible to relax the top of the spine without affecting the whole spine.

In addition to this, massage your neck muscles well. Get someone else to do it, if you have influence or money! That is the easiest way to start.

Once your neck muscles are relaxed, just roll your head around on your neck, this way and that, to keep it easy. There is a wonderfully restful feeling which creeps over you when your neck is relaxed. Once you know it, you will strive to keep it.

CREAM OF STATE H. S. CAGERS GET INTO FRAY TODAY

The State Champions Will Emerge From Games
Starting Today

Champaign, Ill., March 24—(AP)—The cream of Illinois' 1932 prep basketball crop tempered by two weeks of hard tournament play, will begin a three-day joust for state championship in the University of Illinois gymnasium here today.

Springfield and Canton, Lawrenceville and Rantoul, Kewanee and Benton and Hillsboro and Morton high school of Cicero are this year's contenders. Only two of them, Springfield and Canton, have been state champions before, and only one, Rantoul, was in the final classic here last year.

Benton high school sent a representative here four years ago when Canton won its only championship. Springfield has not won the title since 1917 although the Capital city team was here in 1921.

The eight contenders are all that remain from a starting pack of 811 high school teams that began competition in district tournaments two weeks ago. In the melee many powerful teams have been eliminated but the eight that will perform here for three days this week represent an excellent cross-section of better basketball in Illinois high schools.

The final tournament opens at 3 P. M. today with Springfield and Canton, natural rivals, taking the floor first. There are two games this afternoon and two tonight, bringing all eight teams into play. Two games are scheduled for Friday night, the semi-finals—and the final game will be played Saturday night after the consolation contest is staged.

Tourney No Set-Back
This year's tournament will be no set-back from Southern Illinois comes a strong contender. Lawrenceville, victor in the final game of the Salem section 26 to 20 over Collinsville. D. V. Peacock, an Illinois graduate, is coach of the Lawrenceville outfit.

The Springfield-Canton contest is a "natural," with Mark Peterman's team stacking up against the school where he gained his remarkable reputation. Canton is coached by Archie Chadd, Butler University basketball product.

Coach Fred Adam will be taking his Rantoul lead to the state for the second consecutive year. Illinois Wesleyan's center, Ross Anderson, is coach of the Kewanee outfit which won the Moline sectional by whipping Galesburg 10 to 6. Kewanee must face Benton, conquerer of Johnson City. Hubert Tubor, another Illinois graduate, is tutoring the Benton boys.

Hillsboro's coach is Joe Feirhelly, of Carthage college. His team will be here by virtue of a 28 to 22 victory over Monticello at Mattoon. Cicero sends its Morton high school team, coached by N. Z. Zeibell, another Illini. Morton comes to Champaign the victor over Sycamore 22 to 8.

This will be the 25th annual state tournament. Never has the same city in Illinois had more than two championship teams. Five cities, Peoria, Centralia, Elgin, Rockford and Freeport have had two champions each since state tournaments were organized in 1908. Since 1919 when tournaments began here only Elgin has had two victories.

At Los Angeles—New York (N) 6; Detroit (A) 1.

At San Antonio, Tex.—Chicago (A) 13; San Antonio (TL) 5.

At San Francisco—Chicago (N) 6; San Francisco (PC) 5.

At Oakland, Cal.—Oakland (PC) 9; Pittsburgh (N) 3.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—The Braves are out to catch fish today instead of baseballs.

As no game is scheduled for today, many of the Boston team are going out on the water to try their luck.

The others are going to watch the game between the Yanks and the Cardinals.

Savannah, Ga.—A double-header, if the weather man is nice, is on tap for the Red Sox today.

The game scheduled for yesterday was washed out as had been intracamp games earlier in the season. So when a double header was suggested for today, Manager Collins jumped at the chance.

Winter Haven, Fla.—The Phillies today play Newark in the last game here this season. They rest Friday and on Saturday go to St. Petersburg to engage the Yanks in the Phils' last game in Florida this year.

They got an unexpected rest yesterday when a downpour prevented their scheduled game with the St. Louis Browns.

Fort Myers, Fla.—Jow Bowman and Merritt "Sugar" Cain congratulated themselves today on having survived a wedding out which saw three slabs of cake and a bottle of champagne.

Connie Mack announced that Eddie Trask, William Brithman and Robert Chandler, hurling hopefuls, had failed to make the rifle.

Biloxi, Miss.—Prospects for developing a pitcher from among the young aspirants down here with Washington Senators were no brighter today.

Yesterday, against the Baltimore Orioles, young Mike Delaney went wild, walking four to account with one hit, for as many Orioles runs.

San Francisco—First string pitchers of the Cubs are ready for the full nine innings. Charley Root and Guy Bush have come through for the route and Manager Rogers Hornsby has decided that all of them must do the same things before the eastward trek. Bush was hammered for nine hits yesterday but mostly after a Cub four-run spurge in the first inning which won them a 6 to 5 decision over the San Francisco Seals.

San Antonio, Tex.—American League batters can start fearing Ted Lyons right now. The White Sox star made his pitching debut yesterday and held San Antonio of the Texas League hitless and scoreless for the three innings he worked.

The team started breaking camp today for the exhibition tour that ends in Chicago, April 11.

San Diego, Cal.—Charlie Gehring is back in the game. That was the big news as the Detroit Tigers arrived here to open a two game series with Hollywood here this afternoon.

Having conquered a stubborn and belated case of oak poisoning, Gehring was in the line-up yesterday for the first time since the training schedule opened.

Tampa, Fla.—Cincinnati's pride in acquisition of Ernest Lombardi and Wally Gilbert from the Brooklyn Dodgers was swelled further today.

Though the scorer marked the contest with the Dodgers as a 3-3 tie when rain drowned out the last three innings yesterday, the Reds

PHILLIES APPEAR BETTER; EXPECT HIGHER POSITION

Shotton's Team Seems To Have Been Much Improved

Winter Haven, Fla., Mar. 24 — (AP)—Far from appearing a fluke factor in the National League picture this spring, the Philadelphia Nationals look strong enough to figure in a prospective five-club fight for fourth place.

They do not hear the pennant bee buzzing nor does their Manager Burt Shotton, dream of miracles in this age of enforced realities but he most decidedly thinks his club will show improvement, for at least three reasons. Its followers think it will battle Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, Boston and Cincinnati in the tussle to get out of the second division.

First and foremost is the Phils' outlook for much better pitching, with some adequate talent for the all-important "mop-up" work, as well as a "Big Four" consisting of Phil Collins, Jim Elliott, Ray Bengie and Clise Dudley.

Second, there is more speed and aggressive spirit manifest. The team is varying the slugging monotony by hunting and base-running. Finally Shotton has real hopes of bolstering an outfield that for the past few seasons has consisted of Klein, Klein and Klein.

Thinks Klein Best

Personally, Shotton does not think there is another outfielder in the league as good as Chuck Klein, or Indianapolis, the broad shouldered who blasted Grover Alexander for a double the first time he batted in the big show and who has thumped out a four year average of .360.

To strengthen the outer patrol, where enemy singles have been sifting through for doubles and triples Shotton has confidence in Hal Lee for left field and a new comer, George Davis, from St. Paul, for the middle garden. Davis formerly starred for New York University and comes up after four good seasons in double A company.

If they do not measure up, the Phils have the veteran Rube Bressler or the choice of Russ Scarritt, ex-Red Sox, or Fred Brickell, a speed merchant but weak stickler.

Looks For Pitching

Aside from Bengie, Dudley, Collins and Elliott, the big southpaw who won 19 games for a sixth place club last year, Shotton bases his anticipation of better pitching upon the showing of a trio of newcomers, Roy Hansen, tall southpaw from Dallas, Reg Grabowski, signed as a free agent and Edgar Holley, right hand pitcher from Kansas City. Frank Watt, Bob Adams, a 20-year-old boy obtained from Richmond, and Stew Bolen, left hander, are candidates for the two remaining staff jobs.

At Todd from Dallas, is one of the best looking young backstops on view in any Florida camp.

He seems certain to make himself useful, in support of Virgil Davis, No. 1 receiver, and Harry McCurdy.

With Captain Arthur (Pinkie) Witney in improved health for his work at third, and Less Mallon a much improved second baseman, the infield appears the backbone of the club's defensive strength. Dick Bartell is at short and Don Hurst, a slugger, on first. In reserve are Barney Friberg and George Knothe up from New Orleans. Knothe is a member of the Passaic, N. J. athletic tribe that also includes Fritz Knothe, Boston Braves' infielder.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS

By Laufer

worthy blab, blab, blab, blab. . .

(That's Joe Humphries).

Clang

(That's the opening bell).

Pals and pal-ees, you'll have to go on from there by yourselves. I don't know how it'll finish. Nor does anybody else around this man's town.

Of course, all efforts were bent in an attempt to determine the winner, I even went so far as to break in on the gladiators and ask their personal and private opinions. Said Battalino:

"I'll pin his ears back."

Said Billy the Kid: "I'll knock his ears off."

Said Pete Reilly, Bat's manager: "Bat'll knock him bow-legged."

Said Jack Hurley, Billy's boss, "old Will'll knock him cross-eyed."

All very interesting, very feed-boxy, but which slant is the right one. That Battalino will emerge with no ears and eyes a la Turpin? Or that Petrolle will return to his sweet wife, ears pinned back and legs a la cowboy? And to make matters more confusing, one must remember in weighing these various statements, that there is a chance, even though it be an outside one, that the parties concerned are biased.

So I'll tell you what let's do. While the children are out at play let us gather in the sun parlor and figure out tonight's battle. We'll use a question and answer arrangement, by special permission of the District Attorney.

Q. What's Battalino got besides an ugly pan and voting rights in Hartford, Conn?

A. First of all he's got a heart bigger than Minnie the moocher's and Minnie's ticker, you know, is bigger'n a whale. Petrolle will have to knock him colder than the bottom of a well to keep him on the floor. He's a right smart puncher, knows a lot of the answers, more endurance than an eight-day clock, and plenty of youth and the ambition that goes with it.

Q. What's Petrolle got other than an uglier pan than Battalino and a horse blanket bathrobe?

A. He's got everything but youth. This deficiency is taken care of, however, by a punch in either hand that will make an 18-year-old feel like Zara Agha when it lands. He knows all the answers. He never wastes a shot, never squanders a breath, never makes a useless move. A good stiff punch on the profile only tends to wake him up, make him mad, and set him going. He's about as nervous and flighty as a Supreme Court judge.

Q. Now that we've analyzed the men, who'll win?

A. Petrolle in about eight or nine heats.

Q. Are you sure?

A. How sure you mean? Real sure?

Q. Uh-huh, real sure.

A. No. And get out of here, before you turn the goldfish over.

The Boston Braves, according to a Wall Street betting commissioner, are a 25 to 1 shot to win the National League pennant. This time last year they were quoted at 50 to 1. Ask 'em for a raise, Shires, ask 'em for a raise.

All's well.

PETROLLE AND BATTALINO TO MEET THIS EVE

Big Crowd Expected
To See Sluggers
In The Garden

New York, Mar. 24 —(AP)—They have boosted the prices for the 12-round bout between Billy Petrolle and Christopher (Bat) Battalino, but even that may not prevent a near-capacity crowd from jamming into Madison Square Garden tonight.

No fight this indoor season has created quite so much excitement or stirred up quite so much argument. The crowd seems certain to reach the 15,000 mark and there may be as many as 18,000 in the big Eighth Avenue arena when the combatants step into the ring.

Starting with his sensational and totally unexpected victory over Jimmy McLarin here in November 1930, Petrolle has developed into one of the best box office attractions in the business. Big crowds turned out, after that, to see him drop two decisions to McLarin, and knock-out Justo Suarez, Eddie Ran and Billy Townsend.

The former Fargo Express, who now lives in Duluth, looks like a fighting man, and, strangely enough in these days, acts like one in the ring.

He is a powerful puncher with either hand but a left hook is his best weapon. He has all kinds of stamina and courage and the ring wisdom he has learned from more than 150 professional fights.

He will be a slight favorite over Battalino, but the Hartford boy has overturned the dope so often that the customers are beginning to believe he is invincible whenever the experts pick him to lose. He is not so hard a puncher as Petrolle but he carries plenty of steam in his fists just the same. He apparently has unlimited stamina for in most of his bouts he has finished almost as strong as he started.

Although he was featherweight champion only a couple of months ago Battalino will have to concede little weight to Petrolle. The Hartford boy probably will come in at 138 and Petrolle does not figure to be more than a pound or two over that.

Expedition Off To Rescue Explorer

Sao Paulo, Brazil, March 24—(UP)—An expedition was en route today to the great jungle to pick up the phantom trail of the lost explorer, Colonel P. H. Fawcett who vanished seven years ago.

The small band of men who started for the uncharted and dense, green land of the interior was headed by Stephan Rattin, Swiss trapper, who believes he talked with Col. Fawcett, held prisoner by Indians, at a native village in the jungle.

Rattin's story of seeing a white man guarded by Indians was considered sufficiently authentic to warrant sanction by British officials for his rescue expedition.

"Until That Day When I Drink It
New With You in My Father's Kingdom."

(Read Matthew 26-17-30.)

These cryptic words, spoken by Jesus on the night of His betrayal can be understood only by those who have learned to sense their inward meaning. Their significance must be felt, for it lies beyond the reach of merely rational analysis. For this reason, while they baffle and confuse the minds which come to them unprepared, they speak to the kindled heart the words of simple courage. As He went out that night to be delivered up, so all who must His disciples be ready to go where duty calls. The Light may seem to grow dim, even to be extinguished; yet the work of building the Kingdom must and will be carried on. Some day (and of this there is no doubt) we will drink the new wine with Him. For the present, we must follow Him to Gethsemane and the Cross.

Prayer: O Thou Redeemer of our broken lives, Thou Light that can not be put out, be with us, we pray through the nights of our Gethsemanes. Thou hast called us to Thy service and Thou hast poured forth upon us the Radiance of Thy Glory. Fortify us, by Thy Spirit, against the onslaught of every foe; that, when we drink in solitude the cup of bitterness and woe, we may be mindful of Thy love which has prepared for us a cup of Joy which Thou shalt drink with us when the task has been accomplished, and our Father's Kingdom has come. Amen.

American Miner In Mexico Slain

Washington, March 23—(AP)—

The American embassy at Mexico City advised the State Department today that police officials were actively investigating the murder of Albert P. Ennis, who was killed near Oaxaca and hoped to make arrests this week.

Ennis was found strangled a short distance from Oaxaca several days ago and apparently had been killed some time before. He was an American mining man.

Records at the State Department show his address on May 27, 1927, was New York City.

The Real Heroes of Shanghai

While big shells whined overhead and fires added to the menace, Red Cross workers, Catholic nuns and other volunteers risked death to rescue 5000 civilians from the ruins of Shanghai's Chapel sector, which was bombarded for days by the Japanese. A BOOK A DAY

BY BRUCE CATTON

TWO ACTRESSES BARE THE SOUL
Maeterlinck's Paranour and Ellen Terry Revealed in New Biographies

Two books that you are going to hear a good deal about this spring are "Souvenirs—My Life With Maeterlinck," by Georgette Leblanc, and "Ellen Terry and Her Secret Self," by Edward Gordon Craig.

Unfortunately, each book is a rather dreary bit of self-exhibitionism. If you want to be able to talk about them, hop to it; if you're looking for something interesting to read, you might as well pass on to the next shelf.

Georgette Leblanc was a French actress. One day she read something Maeterlinck had written and decided that here was a kindred soul at whom she must straightaway throw herself. Suiting action to the word, she arranged an introduction and proceeded to do the throwing.

An informal and fairly enduring establishment followed. Maeterlinck seems to have been inspired by the affair to write some of his finest plays and poems—or, at least, so Mme. Leblanc tells us. But unless you're a devoted student of Maeterlinck, I can't see why the book would enthrall you.

Mr. Craig gives what purports to be an intimate, "homey" picture of his mother, the famous English actrix. You get, however, a much clearer picture of Mr. Craig himself, and it isn't exactly an engaging one. He's still angry because of the publication of the Shaw-Terry letters, and the motive power behind the writing of this book.

TODAY IS THE WORLD WAR ANNIVERSARY

GERMAN ADVANCE CONTINUES
On March 24, 1918, the great German drive in Picardy continued, their forces taking Ham, Peronne, Chauncy and the heights of Monchy during the day.

A German dispatch said that more than 40,000 prisoners had been taken since the offensive began. The British had been pushed back as much as 15 miles over a front of nearly 60 miles.

Semi-official reports said that American and French troops in great force were being hurried to the British lines. French forces prepared to take over a sector of the widening British front.

Proposals for a commander-in-chief for the Allied armies in France were considered.

Paris was again bombarded by the German long-range gun, which was located in the forest of St. Gobain by French aviators.

on the Republican Ticket

Mr. Collins

HAS been faithful to all farmers and all taxpayers . . . He voted for and helped to pass bills favoring his district. He has vigorously opposed all bills that would confer hardships on any of his people. He is for you 100 per cent—he has and will keep every promise.

HE VOTED FOR and helped to pass the bill lowering the state license on small farm trucks, etc.

HE VOTED FOR and helped to pass the bill improving the Chattel Mortgage Law, enabling the farmer to get credit.

HE VOTED FOR and helped to pass the State Income Tax Law, which will make Chicago wealth and personal property tax dodgers pay their honest, fair and just taxes in the support of our state government. This is not an additional tax, but means LOWER TAXES for the farmer, personal property and home owner.

HE VOTED FOR and helped to pass the bill removing the necessity for licenses for clover hullers, threshing machines, ensilage cutters, corn shredders, hay presses, portable sawmills, and similar vehicles used for agricultural purposes.

HE VOTED FOR and helped to pass the bill paying mothers' pensions, blind pensions and judges' salaries out of state taxes, thereby reducing county taxes on real estate and farm land, and lightening the burden for small home owners.

HE VIGOROUSLY OPPOSED increased appropriations and increased salaries of all state senators and representatives.

HE VIGOROUSLY OPPOSED the additional two-cent increase in gas tax.

HE VIGOROUSLY OPPOSED state tax on cigarettes and tobaccos.

HE VIGOROUSLY OPPOSES senatorial reapportionment, and giving Chicago and Cook County full representation in both houses, as this would work a material hardship on all counties except Cook.

Song Writers Seek Lyrics To Entice Prosperity

New York, March 24 —(AP)—All Mr. Rudy Vallee has to do to make a name for himself—again—is to write a theme song for prosperity. President Hoover handed the megaphone maestro the assignment yesterday when Vallee called at the White House to pay his respects.

"Mr. Hoover smilingly told me," Vallee said, "that if I could sing a song that would make people forget their troubles, he would give me a medal."

The idea of a serenade to the goddess of plenty—"Cornucopia, Here We Come!" was a title one songwriter thought up, quick as a flash—bounced around Tin Pan Alley today like a ball on a roulette wheel looking for a good number to land on.

One of the more talkative, if possible, piano-punishers broke into a cold sweat at what he frankly confessed was the first inspiration he has had since he did that smash: "Ducky-Wucky, Don't Youse Leave Me No Mo."

"It would be surefire," he exclaimed, fumbling for a handkerchief and coming up with the laundry bill.

"A wow," said another, clamping his hoof down on the loud pedal and whaling the keyboard with all the delicacy of a circus roustabout driving a tent stake.

The more mature minds among the music makers, however, mullied the matter. They recognized the task would be no light one. Finding rhymes for "moon" (crown, spoon, June, etc.) and "love" (above, turn, dove, shove, etc.) is a simple matter. A rhyme for "Reconstruction Finance Corporation" is not so easy.

Tin Pan Alley is not a thoroughfare to curl up and roll away at the first breeze of an idea, some erudite persons to the contrary notwithstanding. It began casting about today for the kind of lyrics that would definitely launch America down the way of happiness.

Prosperity lyrics suddenly were thicker than Mississippi mud.

Capone To Remain In Jail Six Weeks

Chicago, March 24 —(UP)—A U. S. penitentiary cell was one step closer today for Al Capone with a denial by the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals of his request for a re-reading of income tax fraud conviction.

The court, however, granted a 30-day stay to allow appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court of the case which bears an 11-year penitentiary and jail sentence and a $50,000 fine.

On this basis Capone will remain for at least six more weeks in the Cook county jail where he was incarcerated after his conviction last October. His attorneys believed the Supreme Court would require at least two weeks to consider the appeal.

U. S. District Attorney George E. O. Johnson sought to prevent the stay on the grounds the government was forced to maintain extra guards at the jail day and night to watch Capone.

Signs of Spring

Washington, Mar. 24 —(UP)—Five little sturgeons were swimming today in the tank with Spencer, whose 15 years of carefree solitude have given way to the responsibilities of marriage and parenthood, and his bride.

Spencer is the big fish in the Commerce Department's aquarium and the advent of the little Spencer was dignified with a departmental press release. M. S. Spencer is the former Miss Vessie. The father brought up from babyhood by the Bureau of Fisheries, has been the subject of many scientific studies of sturgeon habits and characteristics.

Philadelphia, March 24 —(UP)—Even the fish in Fairmount Park aquarium know it's spring.

A love affair, typical of the modern younger generation, was in evidence today between two of the haemulon macrostomum, known to their more intimate friends as blue bow grunts.

They pass much of their time with their lips pressed closely together, according to Dr. Robert O. Van Deusen, who presides over them.

The Japanese faintly, the piscatorial Don Juan that he is, evinces an amused sophisticated smile at such goings on. The Amber Jack, around whose frigid personality originated the expression "cold as a fish," displayed the disgusted sneer of the disillusioned old man. And the Black Drum, or "Old Maid," throws up her bony fins in horror.

But most of the neighbors have adopted the philosophy of "live and love" because, after all, fish who live in glass houses should not throw stones.

Mass production of the bureau of industries has increased in a decade from 1,500,000 in 1921 to more than 4,350,000 in 1931.

The dime-a-dance girl

BY JOAN CLAYTON

BEGIN HERE TODAY
ELLEN ROSEBERRY, beautiful 20-year-old, loves LARRY HARROWGATE, young artist. When he becomes engaged to another girl Ellen agrees to marry STEVEN BARCLAY, 57 years old and wealthy. Her impoverished family is indebted to Barclay.

Barclay has been married before. Scandal accompanied his Mexican divorce from LIDA GRAYSON, dancer. To avoid publicity Ellen and Barclay are secretly married. They drive to his Long Island home, deserted except for FERGUS, the butler. There Barclay suffers a heart attack. LOUIS SYMES, Barclay's lawyer, arrives with doctors and nurses. Barclay dies at dawn.

Symes tells Ellen her marriage is not legal because papers proving Barclay's divorce have been stolen. Ellen yields all claims on Barclay's fortune to avoid scandal. Then she learns Larry Harrowgate is Barclay's nephew. Heartbroken, she returns home.

Ellen distrusts Fergus. She returns to work at her old job as a hostess at Dreamland dance hall. Larry comes there, tells her he loves her. Ellen lacks the courage to tell him of her marriage to Barclay. She and Larry go to buy the engagement ring.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIV

AT luncheon which they ate in a quiet, candle-lighted restaurant, Larry began to tease Ellen about the wedding ring. "I do believe you selected that plain ring to save me money. You felt guilty over this one."

He flicked the solitaire with his thumb-nail.

"I do feel sort of guilty," she admitted timidly. "You're too good to me."

"What a whopper!"

"It's true."

"Get that out of your head, darling, and instantly. No one could be too good to you or for you. You're the sweetest, dearest, most honest—"

"You might not know."

"He laughed at such foolishness. "What are you thinking about, sweet, with your eyes so big and your face so solemn?" he asked after a while.

Ellen put down her coffee very carefully. "I was thinking that I'm not nearly so good as you think I am," she faltered. "I was thinking that I don't want you to feel that way about me. It isn't right. It would break my heart to tell you."

"I suppose you're hinting at that dark past of yours," Larry teased. "Well, I'm willing to risk it."

"Are you?" she asked so earnestly that he was sobered.

"What are you driving at?" he demanded. "What do you mean?"

"I don't mean anything," Ellen said suddenly and felt a little sick at seeing the relief which lighted his face.

"Girls are that way," she explained. "They can't be happy and not be analytical, and pretty soon they're unhappy wondering if things are too perfect to last. Silly, isn't it?"

"Darn silly,"

"Just a minute, darling."

A small pile of mail lay on the long oak table by the fire. He had paused there and was riffling through the envelopes. He frowned at a cheap, greasy-looking one with his name and address printed in queer, crude letters, hesitated and then withdrew that envelope from the others. Ellen, looking up, surprised an odd expression on his face and was diverted from her own problem.

"Do you mind if I open this?" he asked, still frowning faintly. "Certainly not."

Puzzled, a little apprehensive, she watched as he tore open the envelope. Larry read the message, tore the cheap printed paper once across and glanced around for a wastebasket.

"What is it, Larry?"

"It's nothing."

With a sudden, secondary impulse he fitted the torn page together and smoothed it out on the table. "Well, darling," he said doubtfully, hesitantly, "since

Presently after the meal had been served and the mints and fingerbowls had come and disappeared they arose and left the place. Larry was looking tall and handsome. Ellen was so near to him that the mingled sweetness of her youth and freshness and the indefinite perfume she wore merged delightfully with the sharp, spicy smell of the big flower at her shoulder.

THEY were to stop at his studio to see an apartment next door which Larry thought might "do" for them. Ellen was deliciously thrilled at such concrete evidence that soon they were to be married and have a home of their own. She was thrilled at Larry's desire for her advice though she knew anything he liked she, too, would like.

The superintendent was not to be found when they reached the building. After a consultation they decided to wait in the studio. Larry drew the vivid curtains in the cheerful, slip-covered room, lighted candles and knelt to lay a fire.

As she leaned back against the deep-cushioned divan, so far back that the tips of her shoes did not touch the floor, and watched Larry lay the fire, Ellen felt an almost blinding happiness. She thought of Larry in days to come at work in this room, of herself helping him. She thought of sitting at breakfast with him discussing his plans and her plans for the day, of sharing his problems, his thoughts, his dreams.

She knew suddenly and quite simply that the dream she was building would have to be built on a foundation of truth, of absolute truth. Why, she must tell Larry everything. There was nothing else to do. There would be no doubts now, no hesitations, no evasions.

FLYING CHIEF OF THE "MOUNTIES"

Here's Closeup of Unknown Celebrity Who Now Heads Canada's Crack Police

By NEA Service
Ottawa—(and get him by air!)
To the famous slogan, "get your man," of Canada's Royal Mounted Police, that picturesque "army" of 1200 red-coated men whose beat extends to within 700 miles of the North Pole, may soon be added these words:

For under Major General James H. MacBrien, noted Canadian aviator who has been named chief of this world-renowned band of man-hunters, Canada's "Mounties" are taking to the air. For much of their work, planes are supplanting their equipment of horses, dog sleds and snowshoes, long used in patrolling their lonely Arctic domain.

Recently, General MacBrien's men used airplanes to search out and bomb the retreat of a mad trapper who had defied the "Mounties" after murdering one of their number. That expedition having "got its man," it is now expected that the airplane will become an increasing aid in patrolling northern Canada's bad lands, especially since the new chief is one of the outstanding amateur pilots in the Dominion.

General MacBrien's own life has been as colorful as that of the picturesque police organization that he heads.

ARMY VETERAN—

The new chief is a soldier—54 years old now, but straight as an arrow and as hard as nails as the result of 21 years in the army. He joined up when he was 19, leaving his books and studies and his intended career as a school teacher, for adventure with the British expeditionary forces to South Africa in the Boer War of 1897.

He returned safe and sound to his home at Port Perry, Ontario, and then joined the Northwest Mounted Police as a trooper in the early days of settlement of western Canada.

Leaving the Mounted at the end of his term, General MacBrien went back to the army, was promoted steadily and came out of the World War a full-fledged major-general. The story is told that during his early service in France he took his first airplane flight as an observer. He liked it, and began to fly more. Later, before his troops went into an attack, General MacBrien personally flew over the enemy positions to better plan the action, risking anti-aircraft shells and attack by German planes. He is said to have been the only general who did this—but then he was the youngest, and flying was a young man's game. Back in Canada, he was put in charge of the Dominion's defenses and having seen the effect of aviation in war time he followed its development closely. He went so far as to take a full course in aviation at a Canadian army training field and came out with his pilot's certificate.

In 1917, General MacBrien found himself in the position of other generals who have to depend on their salary. His pay was insufficient to uphold his position as Canada's chief-of-staff and give his five children college educations. He resigned to enter commercial aviation as general transport manager of a large aviation concern, spent much of his time in the air and began organizing Canadian flying clubs.

IN NEW FIELD—

He made two trans-Canada jaunts in his personal sport plane, a feat accomplished by few amateur pilots and by no one else anywhere near his 50 years of age.

As chief of the "Mounties," to which position he was named last summer, General MacBrien operates in an entirely new field. Before, he planned Canada's defenses only along the 3000-mile international boundary, along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and along the Alaska-Yukon boundary. Now he studies maps of northern Canada from the fringe of civilization all the way to the North Pole, for this is now his territory.

Their northernmost police post is only 700 miles from the pole. It is at Bache Peninsula, Ellesmere Island, in the bleak Arctic.

Adventurous young men of every nationality seek to join this picturesque police force and General MacBrien has to turn down thousands of applicants every year for only British subjects are eligible. Recruits must be physically fit, unmarried, between 22 and 40 years of age, weigh at least 175 pounds and stand at least five feet in height. Three years is the term of enlistment and the pay runs from $2 a day up, depending on rank and seniority.

General MacBrien makes his home and his headquarters in Ottawa. As the commander-in-chief of the Mounted Police, he can be seen at practically all state functions resplendent in scarlet and gold and the feathered hat of his rank.

Cleora Otterbach of the grades won the right to compete in the meet held last year. The champion speller that won the event last year was Velma Mittan of the Miller school. Spelling will be partly written and oral, with the finals entirely oral. Complete information can be secured from Prof. D. C. Thompson.

Coach Ott awarded the following members of the Compton high school cage team, major letters, Cleus Chaon, Erwin Grosshans, Lee Archer, Robert Cook, Lester Kaufman, Wilbur Zinke. Minor letters were presented to Ivan Florscheutz, Eldo Johnson, and LaVen Hopwood Grosshans and Kaufman received their mchograms for the first time, while Chaon, Archer, Cook and Zinke has received the coveted "c" before. Although the locals were unable to make a boastful showing in their schedule, the team displayed evidence of good coaching. See you next year.
